Britain Acts To End Rebel Bomb Attacks On Shipping

Destroyer Is Rushed to Mallorca to Demand Explanation.

Protest to Franco Is Believed Likely

London Fears Other Powers May Be Drawn Into Conflict.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 7.—The British destroyer Garland sped to the Spanish insurgent Island of Mallorca tonight to present an imperative demand for explanation of aerial attacks against the destroyer Gallant.

There were indications the government later would make strong representations to Gen. Francisco Franco at his Salamanca headquarters, for the Gallant incident added to numerous others with insurgents at sea and to British fear that other European nations may yet be dragged into the Spanish civil war.

Insurgent planes which apparently came from Mallorca dropped 15 bombs alongside the Garland yesterday in two attacks off the eastern coast of Spain. They were finally driven away by the destroyer's antiaircraft fire.

Germany Accused.

The Spanish Valencia regime added to tension here with a new charge that German warships were aiding insurgent vessels off Spain and patrolling areas "where their presence is not justified" by the plan of the European neutrality patrol.

Interference with the British freighter Thorpehall yesterday added also to British impatience. The Thorpehall first was molested in the Mediterranean, and again in the Bay of Biscay.

Three British destroyers convoyed her to Bilbao after driving back the insurgent warship Almirante Cervera.

The admiralty ordered warships in the Mediterranean to swing into action in the event they are molested.

France, Russia Accused.

Rome, April 7 (AP).—Charging France and Russia with violating the "hands-off" agreement, the government-controlled press challenged those nations tonight to prove their adherence to the nonintervention accord.

"Not for a single day since nonintervention became effective has the influx of volunteers to Spain from France and Russia been halted," said Virginio Gayda in the Giornale D'Italia.

Casualties Are Heavy.

By the Associated Press.

Spanish government and insurgent troops smashed through each other's lines on widely separated fronts yesterday with hundreds of casualties reported on both sides.

Insurgents, led by Gen. Emilio Mola, battered back heavy concentrations of Basque troops defending mountain passes leading to Durango, gateway to Bilbao, the Basque capital in northern Spain.

Mola's forces announced they had shattered government lines at Amboto Peak, 16 miles from Bilbao. Forcing the Basques to flee up sides of the peak itself, the insurgents said they left 876 government dead in one sector.

Mrs. Joe Cronin's Twin Babies Die; Condition Critical

Sarasota, Fla., April 7 (AP).—Mrs. Joe Cronin, wife of the Boston Red Sox manager, was reported to be in a serious condition after giving berth to twins, a boy and a girl, who died today at the Sarasota Hospital.

Mrs. Cronin, the adopted daughter and former secretary of Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators, was ordered to the hospital by Dr. W. C. Kennedy this morning as her husband and his players were about to start for Sebring to play the Newark Bears. Cronin turned over the team to Coach Tom Daly and accompanied his wife to the hospital.

Gala Cherry Festival Opens at Dawn Today

Capital Will Entertain Thousands With Fair Weather Promised.

The Nation's Capital and its tens of thousands of visitors will give full vent today to their annual cherry blossom enthusiasm, attending a coronation of their own and otherwise hailing the onset of the Japanese blooms.

Though the weather man warned that showers may mar tonight's climactic ceremonies at the Tidal Basin, he predicted warm and rainless weather by day.

Parks authorities pointed out that, while the flowers won't be fully developed before this week-end, there will be a presentable display for today's sunrise program and the crowning tonight of Sakiko Saito, daughter of the Japanese Ambassador, as queen of the festival.

Although the greatest crowds are expected over Saturday and Sunday, when the famed trees of West Potomac Park will be at the height of their spring dress, officials believe no apologies will be necessary for the throngs expected to witness the festival.

At the rehearsal last night Louis J. Louistro, 38, of Del Ray, Va., engineer-mechanic aboard the huge swan boat, was overcome by gasoline fumes as he worked in the engine room of the craft.

The accident occurred as the rehearsal was in progress. Louistro attempted to bring the boat ashore, and it crashed into the wall of the Tidal Basin, ripping out its side above the water line. Three fellow workers promptly reversed the craft and took it out into the Basin again.

They attempted to revive Louistro, who was later brought ashore in a power boat and taken to Casualty Hospital, where physicians said his condition was not serious.

The boat will appear as scheduled in the pageant.

Cherry blossom cocktails, sundaes, dinners and dances have played their part in stimulating interest in the perennial exhibition during the last week.

Auto clubs and gasoline companies are distributing special maps showing how to reach the Tidal Basin and arrows at downtown intersections direct visitors.

It is still too early to say, according to business men, how many visitors will be attracted by the 1937 display but the influx has averaged 250,000 during the last few years.

At 9 a. m. today park police will halt vehicular traffic at the John Paul Jones statue, foot of Seventeenth street, so that chairs may be placed in the Tidal Basin roadways in preparation for the main exercises tonight. Tickets are still on sale at hotels, Union Station, auto

House Passes Sumners' Bill By 122 to 14

Segment of President's Original Court Plan Enacted Separately

Permits Attorney General to Intervene as Equal With Litigants.

By Sidney Olson.

The House cut another segment from the President's original court-reform program last night and passed it as a separate bill by a vote of 122 to 14.

Not a single Representative made even an indirect reference to the President's court plan as the Sumners bill passed.

The bill requires that when constitutional questions arise in lawsuits in Federal district courts, the presiding judge, at his discretion, shall notify immediately the Attorney General, who then will be permitted to intervene in the case as an equal with the litigants, with the right to present testimony.

Where district judges have declared laws by Congress unconstitutional, the Attorney General hereafter may appeal directly to the Supreme Court.

Hold Strategy Meeting.

Representative Hatton W. Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and also sponsor of a recently passed bill authorizing voluntary retirement of Supreme Court justices at the age of 70 at full pay, shoved the new bill through yesterday almost without opposition as he insisted the speeding up of the political process would benefit citizens and Government alike.

In the Senate, Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, said:

"When all the good parts of the President's program are passed in the form of other legislation, leaving the court-packing scheme to stand out in all its nakedness, the full effect of the proposal to add six new Suprmee Court justices can more readily be measured."

Burke and other opposition leaders—Senators Burton K. Wheeler, Montana; Frederick Van Nuys, Indiana, and David I. Wash, Massachusetts, all Democrats—held a strategy meeting yesterday afternoon to study the question of terminating the hearings.

Burke said later the opposition probably would be willing to terminate the hearings "within ten days or so," but added that this might be changed in the light of other developments. He spoke of a "waiting list" of about a score of citizens opposed to the program who still remain to be heard, and noted that a Baptist minister, the Rev. R. Harvey, of Oklahoma City, was now en route by plane to appear before the committee.

Inscription Quoted.

The first direct vote on discontinuance of the hearings will come today, when Senator James H. Hughes (Democrat), Delaware, has promised to move immediate conclusion of hearings. Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, has promised to vote against the motion on the grounds that the hearings "will continue as long as any coherent citizen remains to be heard." The opposition, however, fearing its story may be dulled by continued rehashing, may strike to end the hearings. Burke's absence for a series of speeches against the court plan may indicate they are not yet prepared to take this step.

The willingness of the opposition to set even a tentative date for conclusion of the hearings was seen as the first definite evidence of two beliefs now current among observers: that the opposition is willing to trust to its strength in committee in the next step of the battle; and that the first effect of the string of opposition witnesses has now worn off.

For the third consecutive day only a few faithful hearing attendants and a half-dozen obviously bored tourists dutifully sat through the testimony of two opposition witnesses, Dean Ignatius M. Wilkinson, of Fordham University School of Law, and Fred Taylor Wilson, historian, of New York.

Wilson, re-telling the history of the various amendments to the Constitution, closed his argument for submission of an amendment directly to the people with "the significant inscription on the slab above the ashes of James Wilson, one of the real makers of the Constitution:

"'That the supreme power should be vested in the people, is in my

Farmers Drive Sit-Downers Out of Idle Hershey Factory After Battle With Clubs, Fists

Bloody Clash Sends 25 to Hospital; Women Join in Melee.

'Loyal' Unit Joins With Countrymen

Milk Market Blockade Causes Riot Against C. I. O. Tactics.

By the Associated Press.

Hershey, Pa., April 7.—Several thousand angry farmers and "loyal" men and women workers of the Hershey Corporation drove more than 1,000 sit-down strikers from the vine-covered factory today after a bloody battle.

Twenty-five of the combatants were attended at a hospital; nearly as many more were taken to physicians or removed to their homes. Most of the victims had battered heads, bruised bodies and fractured arms or legs.

Women joined in the fighting and added their screams to the shouting of the men folk.

Several times the rioting spread to the broad lawns, where both sides gained recruits from the thousands of onlookers who blocked all traffic and shouted encouragement to those battling on the inside.

Town Is Tense.

The picturesque little town, which the multimillionaire, Milton S. Hershey, visioned as a poor farm boy, and which he built in the cornfields near his birthplace, looked on tense today as farmers from six counties joined the nonstrikers in a mass meeting in the big sports arena Hershey built for his Eastern Ice Hockey League Club.

These farmers joined the nonstrikers in demonstrations Monday and Tuesday, protesting against the sit-down, because they sup[illegible] the factory with 800,000 pounds of milk daily. Their market was cut by the strike.

The chocolate plant, largest of its kind in the country, employs approximately 3,000 persons. The strike was called a week ago by C. I. O. leaders, who claimed a majority membership of the workers. They charged the company with violating an agreement reached March 17 by dismissing C. I. O. members. Company officials said the dismissals were on a seniority basis, as provided in the contract, and were made necessary because of a seasonal slump in the chocolate business.

Another parade was held this forenoon, and all Hershey turned out to cheer.

Leaders Hold Parley.

Mennonite women in their little black bonnets and their menfolk in broad-rimmed black hats and long coats, milled about with townfolk, mothers with babies in their arms and tourists who stopped to see the procession.

After the parade, the farmers and nonstrikers met again in the sports arena, while their leaders, executives of the Hershey company and leaders of the Chocolate Workers of America, an affiliatte of the Committeee for Industrial Organization, which called the strike, held a closed conference.

Into this conference the farmers and their allies sent an ultimatum that the sit-downers quit the plant at noon.

While the crowd waited for an announcement from the conference, which they said probably would be the signal to march on the factory, they were entertained by fancy skating. Then the entire assemblage moved onto the ice.

There several speakers urged that no matter what the result of the conference they should go to the plant to see that the strikers left.

Evacuation Announced.

Most of the crowd was on its feet as the noon whistle blew. Foster Wagner, spokesman for the opponents of the strike, announced through a megaphone that the strikers had consented to give up the factory.

The announcement was met with jeers and cheers.

A few minutes earlier Wargner had told them:

"If you go into that factory don't lose your heads. Be sure you don't hit a friend."

Shortly after Wagner had announced the strikers would surrender the factory, he was called to a telephone.

The crowd began to disperse, laughing, singing and shouting. "Let's go over anyway," several shouted and they started down the drive.

Wagner ran back into the arena,

Robber Breaks, Names 4 After Store Shooting

Thiebolt Collapses in Grilling; Reward for Wounded Detective.

A 19-year-old desperado captured by police Tuesday night after a fierce gun battle, during which Detective John A. Caton was shot four times, lost his nerve at Police Headquarters yesterday.

Collapsing under police grilling, Ferguson Thiebolt "squealed" on three associates and implicated a fourth man as a "fence" in connection with the robbery of 13 stores, including the High ice cream shop at 806 Upshur street northwest, where the shooting occurred.

Meanwhile, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, commended Detective Caton and said "a suitable reward" awaits him when he recovers from his wounds. It is thought Caton will be promoted to the rank of detective sergeant.

Gun Fight in Store.

Physicians at Emergency Hospital held little hope for the recovery of Louis Knight, 18, one of two brothers involved in the fracas. Louis was shot through the chest. His brother, William, 17, was recovering in Gallinger Hospital from a wound in the arm. He is under police guard.

Thiebolt escaped injury, although a bullet from Caton's gun passed through the sleeve of his jacket.

The gun fight started shortly after 10 p. m. Tuesday when Caton, riding past the store, noticed one of the youths with a handkerchief covering his face pilfering the cash register.

Caton leaped from his car, gun in hand, and entered the shop. Mrs. Virginia Groves, 19, of 724 Quincy street northwest, manager of the store, had been forced into a closet by the bandits.

The young robbers began firing at the policeman. Caton returned their fire until he fell with wounds in his hand, head, left arm and right leg. The youths fled only to be arrested when they applied at Emergency Hospital for treatment.

Yesterday morning, police took into custody Robert M. Sands, 21, a cab driver, of the 300 block Third street southeast, and John J. Simpson, 29, of 2100 block G street northwest. Sands was implicated by Thiebolt in several of the robberies, while Simpson is accused of disposing of some of the loot. Several cartons of cigarettes were recovered from Simpson's home, police said.

Thiebolt signed a confession yesterday admitting breaking into the

Dentist's Wife Implores Judge To Be Lenient

Says Husband Never Could Say 'No;' Sentence to Be Passed Today.

By Edward T. Folliard.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., April 7.—The wife of Dr. Richard G. Miller, alleged chloroform killer, made a poignant plea for leniency to Judge Lemuel F. Smith late today, as her husband's juryless trial approached the end.

Having listened to it, Judge Smith, who once taught Dr. Miller in Sunday school, announced that, the adjournment hour having passed, he would not hand down the sentence until tomorrow morning.

At the outset, Dr. Miller had pleaded guilty to second-degree murder when he was arraigned for the killing of Cleo Sprouse, 18-year-old high school girl, who was pregnant. Under the law, Judge Smith may sentence him to a penitentiary term of from 5 to 20 years.

Mrs. Mozelle Miller, the 53-year-old dentist's wife, made her plea for leniency in a letter addressed to Judge Smith. This was read by Defense Counsel E. V. Walker, as the crowd that jammed the ancient courtroom strained to hear the words.

Dr. Miller, who heretofore has been a rock of poise, wept through most of today's proceedings.

Mrs. Miller, a sad-faced former choir singer, sat next to her husband, clutching his hand, and sobbing audibly as tears ran down her cheeks. Her daughter sat on the other side.

In her letter, she described Dr. Miller as a kind and devoted husband, a man who did not have the heart to bill poor patients for dental work; who treated prisoners in the jail for nothing because "it's bad enough to be in jail without having a toothache," and who, like "all preachers and doctors, was a target for emotional women."

"He was never able to say no," Mrs. Miller said. "He was never able to say no to people whether it was a book agent or somebody who wanted to go fishing."

Dr. Miller, in a confession which was read by Commonwealth's Attorney W. O. Fife, said he was not able to say "no" to Cleo Sprouse when she asked him to perform an illegal operation on her.

Fife said Dr. Miller wrote out the confession in the Henrico County Jail in Richmond, where he had

President Gets Plan to Lower Retirement Age

Would Affect 433,000 U.S. Workers; Added Cost Set at $6,000,000.

By William V. Nessly.

A move to lower by from two to four years the age for optional retirement available to some 433,000 Civil Service employes was carried to President Roosevelt yesterday with a plea for his support.

The explanation of the proposal and request for Presidential backing were made by Robert H. Alcorn, chairman of the joint conference on retirement, who reported after the White House conference that the President is much in sympathy with the principle of the proposal and will confer with Acting Budget Director Bell and others to see what action can be taken. Alcorn estimated the additional cost would be about $6,000,000 yearly.

Alcorn said last night that his organization is primarily interested in obtaining legislative authorization for optional retirement after 30 years of service, irrespective of the age of the employe. The additional cost of this plan, however, is considered excessive at the present time, he said, it being estimated that it would cost about $26,700,000 more than the present system.

In view of the cost item, he said, the organization is supporting the bill of Senator Neely, of West Virginia, which reduces the present ages for optional retirement.

Retirement Now at 70.

The law now provides automatic retirement with an annuity at 70 years of age for general employes, with 15 years of service. Postal employes and mechanics are made eligible at the age of 65 years, and those engaged in hazardous occupations, or in work in which they are exposed to extreme cold or heat, or whose service includes 15 years in the tropics, are eligible at 62.

Optional retirement, with 30 years' service, is made possible at ages two years less than those given for the three classifications, namely 68 years, 63 years and 60 years.

The Neely bill, on the other hand, provides for optional retirement at the ages of 64 years, 60 and 58, with 30 years of service.

Teacher Is Saved By Friend in Fire At Princess Anne

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., April 7.—A pretty teacher of French at the high school here was credited with saving the life of another teacher today in a $50,000 fire that gutted their apartment house and threatened the rest of the town.

The teacher was Miss Gladys Miles. She and Miss Florence Messick were in their apartment when the fire was discovered. Fire Chief Walter McDowell said the blaze originated in the wall board around a hot-water heater in another apartment.

The teachers attempted to leave their apartment, but found the stairway blocked by flames. The room was filling with smoke.

Miss Miles crawled out on the window ledge and lowered herself until her toes rested on the cornice of a window below. Miss Messick, partly overcome by smoke, slid down to her. Miss Miles clung to the ledge with one hand and held the other around her companion to keep her from falling.

The firemen raised ladders to the window and brought down the two women.

Senate Votes Condemnation Of Sit-Downs, Labor 'Spying'

'Policy' Resolution, Passed 75 to 3, Calls Strike Method Illegal; Attacks Employer-Fostered Company Unions Over Vandenberg Protest.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate by resolution yesterday condemned sit-down strikes as "illegal and contrary to sound public policy," offsetting the labor rebuke with a sharp denunciation of so-called industrial "spy" methods and employers who "foster" company unions.

The vote was 75 to 3. It came on a concurrent resolution which must be approved by the House but not by the President. Tantamount only to a "declaration of policy," the action does not have force of law.

Only two Republican Progressives and a Farmer-Laborite voted against it. They were Senators William E. Borah, of Idaho; Lynn J. Frazier, of North Dakota, and Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota.

The vote followed agreement of leaders on the compromise concurrent resolution, after Administration Senate chieftains on Monday had routed an attempt by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, to write condemnation of sit-down strikes into the Vinson-Guffey coal bill.

Resolution in Three Parts.

The Byrnes condemnation would have gone to the President for approval. An effort by Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary to carry yesterday's policy statement to the White House, by making it a joint resolution, was blocked by Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson.

Yesterday's reproach to both the sit-downers and industries employing "unfair" labor practices was in three parts. It made it the sense of Congress:

"That the so-called sit-down strike is illegal and contrary to sound public policy;

"That the so-called industrial spy system breeds fear, suspicion and animosity, tends to cause strikes and industrial warfare and is contrary to sound public policy; and

"That it is likewise contrary to sound public policy for any employer to deny the right of collective bargaining, to foster the company union or to engage in any other unfair labor practice as defined in the national labor relations act."

"Deterrent" Seen.

Following the vote, Majority Leader Robinson conceded to reporters it was only a policy declaration with no other force, but he thought it would serve as a "deterrent" against unfair methods by either employes or employers.

Prior to the vote, Senator Borah had announced he would not condemn labor methods, "until the State or the National Government, or both, devise some legal method by which labor can secure its rights legally." Frazier and Lundeen held similar views.

Objection to the language condemning company unions was raised by Senator Arthur H. Van-

Ford Opposed To Any Dealing With U. A. W. A.

Will Recognize No Union; Announces Strike in St. Louis Plant.

By the Associated Press.

Ways, Ga., April 7.—Henry Ford today announced a short-lived "sit-down" strike last night in his St. Louis assembly plant and said his company had no intention of recognizing the United Automobile Workers Union as a bargaining agency.

"We'll never recognize the United Automobile Workers Union or any other union," the 73-year-old manufacturer said at his winter home here.

John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and U. A. W. A. officials were quick to accept the challenge.

Lewis, addressing a union rally at Detroit, declared, "I have no doubt that Mr. Ford will change his mind," and asserted that unionization of Ford employes is the next objective of the C. I. O. auto workers unit.

Richard T. Frankenstein, organizational director for the union, said: "Henry Ford will recognize the union or else he won't build cars."

Ford announced the St. Louis strike after talking by long-distance telephone with his son, Edsel, president of the company, in Dearborn, Mich.

The elder Ford said he learned a few men struck last night in the St. Louis plant and were "escorted out" of the plant involved.

"But we don't hold any grudge against them and would rehire them," Ford added. "We know the men are simply being duped by the leaders and coerced."

The manufacturer who advised workers last month "to stay out of labor unions" for their own good, said he felt public officials should

Accident Judgment Defaulters May Forfeit Permits to Drive

Washington automobile operators' permits may be suspended for failure to pay any judgment based on a traffic accident, according to an amendment to the District safety responsibility act adopted yesterday by the Senate.

The measure, one of four local bills passed by unanimous consent, now goes to the House.

Recommended by the District Commissioners, the Senate bill strikes out a phrase "in excess of $100" with relation to the judgments.

Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, explained in reply to an inquiry from Majority Leader Robinson that the amendment is designed to penalize motorists who default on accident judgments and yet retain their driving permits.

"Most traffic accident damages involve less than $100," he said, "so that provision for suspending operators' permits does not affect them."

The Senate also passed the King bill to enable the District to participate in the benefits of Federal aid to highways. This bill, if adopted by the House and signed by the President, will give the District approximately $600,000 a year additional for highway construction.

Senator King told the Senate that all the States and Territories of the United States now benefit from the Federal road funds allocations by

Murderer Made Death Mask of Artist Model, Police Think; Trail Leads to Pennsylvania

New York, April 7 (AP).—The gruesome possibility that the Easter eve slayer of Veronica Gedeon and two other persons may have tarried at the bloody crime scene to make a sculptor's death mask of the beautiful 20-year-old model arose tonight as the search for Robert Irwin, sculptor suspect, turned toward Pennsylvania turnpikes.

Grains of plaster of paris and a dirty washcloth found in the apartment where "Ronnie," her mother and a lodger were brutally killed, a tiny strip of adhesive plaster stuck to the girl's neck, and a carton of salt in Irwin's old rooming house—these clews led investigators to confer with Alexander J. Ettl, sculptor and art supplies dealer for whom the missing ex-divinity student worked.

Recounting his interview with the police tonight, Ettl demonstrated the making of a death mask and said the newly disclosed clews indicated "Ronnie" had served as a model, even in death.

The dirty washcloth, he said, bore traces of the soft brown soap artists put on a mask-model's face to prevent sticking of the plaster of paris of which the mask is made—plaster of paris like the apartment crumbs.

On the subject's neck, he continued, they put adhesive tape to hold back the hair.

The sculptor even suggested the girl's death might have been accomplished by closing up the nostril holes customarily made in the mask process so the subject can breathe. Police said the girl died of strangulation.

Salt, of which police found a sizable carton, is used to make the plaster of paris harden quickly, Ettl said.

Meanwhile, as descriptions of Irwin were flashed across the country, police received a telephone report that a man resembling him was hitch-hiking near Stroudsburg, Pa., yesterday.

A motorist who gave him a ride between Stroudsburg and Dingmans Ferry, it was stated, quoted the hiker as remarking:

"There are just two fundamental interests of man—sex and God. God is the stronger." Irwin said that to an interviewer two weeks ago.

Police would not confirm whether the clews pointing to the making of a mask constituted the find that led to the search for Irwin.

Ettl told police Irwin "ordered dry clay flour in January, and in February, six boxwood modeling tools, and on March 4 24 pounds of plaster. His last visit was early last month."

"Police have been to see me several times since the murder," he said. "They came first on Tuesday

Textile Parley Groups Split on 40-Hour Week

British, Japanese Oppose NRA Principle Urged by Americans.

In the face of a broad hint by O. Max Gardner, former Governor of North Carolina and spokesman for American employers at the world textile conference, that the world industry adopt NRA principles, Japanese and British employer delegates remained adamant against proposals for such an international accord.

As the conference of 24 nations split into two camps, however, a copyright United Press article reported that behind-the-scenes maneuvers are in progress designed to induce the Japanese government to support an accord for a 40-hour week for the 14,000,000 workers involved throughout the world.

At conclusion of yesterday's sessions of the conference, the president of the conference, John G. Winant, announced President Roosevelt is expected to address the delegates today following a 4 p. m. tea at the White House.

Opposed by Chinese.

A complicating factor in the discussions of the Japanese position, rapidly becoming the focal point of the conference, was introduced in a speech by Chu Hsueh Fan, Chinese workers' delegate to the meetings, who said enforcement of a 40-hour week in Chinese factories is impracticable unless extraterritoriality rights of foreign countries are weakened to the extent that inspection of their factories is permitted.

He charged 46 per cent of Chinese textile workers are employed in Japanese-owned factories in China, behind the barrier of extraterritoriality.

"It is impossible to enforce social justice in China," he said, "with all the foreign-owned factories operating at 11 hours a day and 66 hours a week, paying 18 American cents for the day, at the same time defying all Chinese factory laws and not bound by the laws of their own countries."

In conclusion he called for an "unbiased study of the facts" as the contribution the conference could make to the problem.

Secret conversations were initiated by Government delegates to the conference shortly after the official representative of Japan, Juitsu Kitaoka, had given veiled indication of how such support could be won.

However, it was strongly indicated that no concrete developments would take place before the meeting of the International Labor Office in June at Geneva, Switzerland. Private talks between Japanese diplomats and spokesmen for the American and British governments are looked to for an understanding on the question before the June conference places the issue on the table for a vote.

Trade Barriers Cited.

At present there is no indication whether Japan can be swung into line with the United States, France, Belgium and Mexico in favor of the short week. However, Kitaoka hinted Japan's readiness to improve workers' conditions if it can obtain a lowering of international trade barriers. He said:

"Without committing my government to a definite promise I may state that a way is before us to establish some concrete practical relations between the liberalization of trade and the raising of working conditions.

"If this is done, this conference will have achieved a historic mission not only in international labor legislation but also in international trade."

Gardner in his NRA reference told the conference, "In the United States there are certain fundamentals upon which most of the affected parties—government, employers and employes—are in substantial agreement.

1. "We have adopted and we maintain as a national policy the 40-hour week.
2. "All parties agree upon the principle of collective bargaining.
3. "We are united in opposition to child labor."

Cries of "very good" and "excellent" were cut short by William Scholes, British empoyers' adviser.

"Changes in the working condition of labor in the United States a few years ago were caused by cataclysmic situations and were not the result of calm and deliberate action," Scholes declared.

He said the international labor conference in Geneva next June "will be the appropriate occasion to discuss the 40-hour week."

Lost Trade Held Preferable to War

New York, April 7 (AP).—Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, told the Academy of Political Science here today that the United States "must make every sacrifice that is honorable * * * to preserve peace."

The Senator declared "it is more economical for the Government to pay a bonus to cover lost trade than for seamen to lose their lives and our people to be invited to war as they were 20 years ago."

The most essential feature in the new inter-American relationship, brought about by the Buenos Aires Peace Conference, is "the sanctity of the pledged word," Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary of State, told a meeting of the academy.

To Flush out Acids and Other Poisonous Waste

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 Miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the beginning of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 Miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Some Political Observers Believe President May Be Forced Into Race in 1940.

By Franklyn Waltman

ONE of the curious aspects of the present political situation is the large number of persons deeply interested in politics who see nothing fantastic nor preposterous about the idea of President Roosevelt being a candidate to succeed himself in 1940. Indeed, some political observers believe that Mr. Roosevelt—at this time—is the best bet for the Democratic Presidential nominee that year.

WALTMAN.

Mr. Roosevelt's tremendous victory in November gave birth to this thought. Adding color to such a possibility is his well-known delight in breaking precedents wherever he confronts them—and, of course, the custom against third terms for Presidents is the greatest of all precedents in American politics.

But there is more substance than this for entertainment of the possibility that Mr. Roosevelt will seek a third term. Some think he may be forced into such a race, even if he desired to avoid it. Signs have appeared since the first of the year of a distinct cleavage within the Democratic Party. Present ever since Mr. Roosevelt strayed off into the paths of unorthodox fiscal measures in 1933, this cleavage has been perceptibly widened by the President's Supreme Court program.

It is too early to assert that irreconcilable factions have developed within the party, but some observers think so. Moreover, they believe that, as 1940 approaches, Democratic dissension will increase, with the conservatives within the party girding themselves for a deadly fight to prevent the New Deal Democrats from naming Mr. Roosevelt's successor. Circumstances will make it impossible for Mr. Roosevelt to designate his heir very far in advance of the 1940 convention and thus the party will be confronted by a nasty fight in that meeting, it is argued.

The party wheelhorses — the Democrats in House and Senate who are more interested in party victories, patronage and holding their jobs than in principles—will seek to avert the threatened disaster to the party, it is further argued, by undertaking to get both sides to agree on Mr. Roosevelt.

Of course this is all conjecture—the type of speculation which makes American politics so fascinating. By next year other factors may have developed which would make this theory the sheerest nonsense. Nevertheless, Mr. Roosevelt is the best vote-getter the party ever has had. No other Democratic figure is so attractive to the voters and the party machines like to keep a sure winner on the ticket.

All of this is apropos as a result of the by-election in Michigan this week. As far as increasing their hold on State offices and on the State Supreme Court, the Democrats made progress. But the trend in that election distinctly was against them.

Thus, whereas Democratic candidates for the Michigan Supreme Court in the spring of 1933 won easily by majorities approximating Mr. Roosevelt's plurality of the previous fall—better than 13,000 votes—the Supreme Court contest this year was decided by a few hundred votes.

The industrial centers of Michigan, outside of Detroit, returned Republican majorities, whereas they were carried by President Roosevelt last fall. In Flint, scene of the General Motors sit-down strike and strongly for the President in November, the three Democratic candidates for the local board of education indorsed by the United Automobile Workers Union, were defeated. One of the successful candidates was a General Motors purchasing agent. Either the automobile workers do not vote as they strike, or they are in a minority.

Michigan Republicans feel that the trend toward the Democrats in their State has been broken and turned back toward them. In one quarter, friendly to the Democrats, the suggestion is made that what was needed in this Michigan election was a Roosevelt on the ticket, and it is contended that the rank and file of the Democratic Party will not overlook the significance of that fact.

This may be the significance of the Michigan election, but it is difficult to say. Michigan in the past has been traditionally Republican. It went Democratic in 1932, snapped back to its Republican moorings in 1934, but gave the Democrats greater majorities in 1936 than four years previously. Local reaction against the sit-down strikes undoubtedly was a factor in the Michigan balloting. The President's Supreme Court proposal may have played a part. Local influences and personalities frequently dominate such an election.

It always is dangerous to undertake to draw general conclusions from a local election in one State. Such balloting no more indicates a Nation-wide trend than does one swallow make a summer. Although the Republicans may feel cheerful about the Michigan result, it is too early for any jubilant yelling from that party.

3 Senators Assail Court Plan On U. S. Round Table Broadcast

In a round table broadcast under auspices of the American Bar Association, three Senators opposed to President Roosevelt's court plan discussed Supreme Court decisions which they said repudiated infringements of civil liberties, and concluded with:

"God save the United States and this honorable court."

This invocation is part of the Supreme Court ritual, and was used last night by Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, to sum up the plea against court revision. The other Senators, who were introduced by F. H. Stinchfield, president of the bar association, were King, of Utah, and Connally, of Texas.

Cites Milligan Case.

Opening the round table, Connally took for discussion the ruling of the court in the Milligan case, wherein the court outlawed military courts set up during the Civil War, calling them and the accompanying suspension of the writ of habeas corpus a road "to anarchy or despotism."

Burke utilized two decisions of the court in his argument, one that of Pierce vs. Society of Sisters, wherein the court said a 1922 Oregon law compelling attendance of all children at public schools, regarded as aimed particularly at parochial schools, was unconstitutional.

The other citation by Burke was Meyers vs. Nebraska, in which the court invalidated a statute of that State prohibiting teaching in any language other than Englis. The court ruled, in an opinion read by Justice McReynolds, that such a law violated the Constitution's guarantees of rights.

Court Called Safeguard.

After a reference to a statement of Woodrow Wilson in which that President praised the courts as furnishing a "nonpolitical forum," King said the tripartite division of government "is our principal safeguard against a despotic form of government."

He took as his text the DeJonge decision in January of this year. In that case the Supreme Court ruled the appellant, a Communist, had been arrested illegally and, in King's words, "that DaJonge, although a Communist, still enjoyed his personal right of free speech and was entitled to take part in a peaceable meeting having a lawful purpose, which was the essence of his personal liberty guaranteed by the Constitution."

Questions Hint Job Insurance May Be Upheld

Stone's Queries at Tax Case Hearing Indicate 5-4 Ruling Possible.

By the Associated Press.

Questions asked by Justice Stone during arguments before the Supreme Court suggested the possibility yesterday that the tribunal might uphold state unemployment insurance legislation by a five-to-four vote.

Already, by a four-to-four ballot, the court has sustained legislation enacted by New York to supplement the Federal social security act.

The evenly divided vote in that case was due to the absence of Justice Stone, who was ill. He is known generally as a liberal.

The arguments yesterday were on an Alabama statute which imposed a payroll tax on both employers and employes to assist those out of work. The similar New York statute which the court upheld taxed employers only.

A. A. Carmichael, Alabama attorney general, contended the Alabama legislation was within the State's power. This was disputed by Borden Burr, of Montgomery, representing the Southern Coal & Coke Co. and the Gulf State Paper Corporation, challengers of the State law's validity.

After Carmichael had explained that a pay roll tax was imposed by Alabama on both the employer and employe, Justice Sutherland asked:

"The man who does the most to relieve unemployment by employing more persons bears the greater burden of the tax—isn't that the effect?"

"I think it would have that effect," the Attorney General said, "but I don't think that is fatal to the act."

Burr contended the legislation took property without due process of law by requiring employers to place money in a pool for the benefit of others.

"Would that make a school tax bad?" inquired Justice Stone. "Bachelors couldn't be called upon to pay a school tax."

"Not if it went into a pool," Burr asserted.

"Could there be an appropriation out of the Treasury to relieve unemployment in Alabama?" Chief Justice Hughes asked.

"Yes," Burr replied.

Another speech challenging the measure was delivered by Forney Johnston, Birmingham attorney for the Gulf States Paper Corporation.

Justice Brandeis questioned Burr as to what he thought the Federal Government could do to avoid another period of unemployment hardship like that during the depression.

"It would be infinitely better if the State were thrown upon its own responsibility, rather than be deprived of its constitutional rights," Burr asserted.

"Is there no way the Federal Government can protect itself against a recurrence?" Brandeis asked.

"I don't know of any, but this way certainly is not constitutional."

"Isn't there another way?" the justice persisted.

"None suggests itself to my mind," Burr replied.

Chief Justice Hughes asked Johnston if a Federal income tax to provide for the unemployed would be constitutional.

After a long exchange over qualifications, Johnston said such a tax in itself would be valid.

Townsend Denounces 'Dole' for 4,000,000

Los Angeles, April 7 (AP).—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old-age pension leader, issued the following statement today:

"I denounce with all the energy I possess this attempt started in Congress yesterday to place 4,000,000 able-bodied young people on a permanent dole, while refusing to provide old-age pensions for 8,000,000 elderly persons unable to work and make a living for themselves."

judgment the great panacea of human politics.'"

Wilson added:

"I close with the words of one of the wise men of old: 'Remove not the landmarks which thy fathers have set.'"

Wilkinson, 50-year-old law dean, remarkably close in resemblance to photographs of President Roosevelt, when the latter was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, covered the general arguments which have been made througout more than four weeks of the hearings, but drove his argument with particular force against the addition of six "wet nurses" to supplement the Supreme Court justices over 70 years of age.

He said:

"Fundamentally, the operation of the plan aims to work an ouster by making uncomfortable, if not vexatious, the continuance on the Supreme Court of justices who under the Constitution are giving life tenure conditioned only upon good behavior."

He further insisted the President's plan was not so much a proposal to "pack the court" as to "push the older Supreme Court justices into retirement."

The hearing today will include testimony of Judge J. Manning, of North Carolina, and Siegfried Hartman, New York lawyer.

Lowden Sees Liberty's Death In Court Plan

Attacks Centralization of Government; Moley Asks 3-Point Program.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 7.—Frank O. Lowden declared tonight adoption of President Roosevelt's court reorganization proposal would destroy "the bulwark of the people's liberties."

The "elder statesman" of the Republican Party contended subordination of the Supreme Court would result in a centralized government with power to determine all prices and wages.

"I am told that some farmers are in favor of bestowing such power upon the Federal Government," he said in a radio address. "I want to issue a solemn warning. The farmers constitute about a quarter of our population. The other three-quarters are interested in low prices for farm products. * * * What chance will the American farmer have in the long run if the Federal Government is given the power to name the prices of the products of the soil?"

The former Governor of Illinois said a constitutional amendment making mandatory the retirement of justices at the age of 70 would have achieved the President's purposes. He added:

"Can anyone think that such a resolution for amendment would not have received the requisite vote in Congress, dominated as it has been by the President?

"Of course, if the people had read between the lines, as well they might, a secret design on the part of the President to pack the court, it would have been overwhelmingly defeated."

Raymond Moley, editor and Columbia University public law professor, proposed three amendments to the Constitution as a means of attaining the objectives President Roosevelt seeks, in a speech before the Chicago Association of Commerce.

"First, we ought to limit by amendment the power of the court to use the due process clauses of the fifth and fourteenth amendments. Second, the Constitution ought to be amended in order to provide that in a vote of the court declaring a new law constitutional, there should be adequate recognition of the fact that when a law has been approved by Congress and the Executive the burden of proof is in favor of its constitutionality. And, third, I would favor compulsory retirement by constitutional amendment of judges who had reached the age of 75."

Former Capital Man Is Killed In N. Y. Blast

Wittlin Dies as Explosion Bulges Building; Gas Jets Found Open.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 7.—Samuel Wittlin, 38, until recently connected with the Labor Department at Washington, was killed today in a gas explosion which bulged out the side of a 16-story East Side apartment house.

Glass was shattered for a block around, and another tenant, three floors below the blast, was treated at a hospital for shock.

Acting Chief Medical Examiner Thomas A. Gonzales said Wittlin, former assistant corporation counsel of New York City, apparently committed suicide. Four open gas jets were found in his apartment, as were letters which District Attorney Sylvester Cosentino said revealed Wittlin was seeking employment.

Mrs. Wittlin, the former Ida Weisbiatt, of Washington, D. C., returned home from a shopping tour about 5 o'clock, three hours after the explosion, to find her husband dead.

After gaining control of her feelings, she said repeatedly "I don't know why he would do it."

Mrs. Wittlin is an attorney.

140 Families in House.

The building housed 140 families, including that of David Dubinsky, American Labor Party leader, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union and one of the Presidential electors for the Democratic ticket in the last election.

Because of a slight bulge in the front of the building, police roped off the street—East Twenty-first street at Second avenue—to keep back thousands of persons.

Dr. Gonzales said he believed gas which had filled Wittlin's apartment was ignited by a spark from an electric refrigerator.

The tenant found suffering from shock three floors below was Mrs. Celia Stoler.

8 Bodies Found Where Plane Hit On Arizona Peak

McNary, Ariz., April 7.—Weary searchers found eight burned and broken bodies late today at the spot high in mountain wilds southeast of here where a luxurious skyliner crashed Saturday.

Bodies of Pilot Glen Moser and Copilot Joe Wolfolk were still strapped to their seats in the smashed and charred wreck.

Two bodies, one that of an elderly man, had been thrown clear when the giant 21-passenger ship drove into the mountain in a snowstorm. Bodies of the other four, all burned beyond recognition, were beneath remains of the plane.

The transport, which was being ferried across country from Burbank, Calif., to New York City, crashed into the mountain almost head-on. Half of the tail was found a quarter-mile away.

Victims of the crash, besides the pilots, were E. R. Moser, 55, father of the pilot; Merle Estey, 29, a Douglas engineer, and his wife, Lucille; Roland Kent, Douglas employe; Mrs. B. B. Bruderlin, mother of a Douglas employe, and Bernard Troyt, jr., 33, parking station operator.

Baltimorean 4th In Bridge Tourney

New York, April 7 (AP).—B. J. Becker, a Philadelphia lawyer, who moved to New York two weeks ago, tonight won the American Bridge League's National Masters Tournament in a blanket finish that saw only three match points span the first three places.

With 614 points Becker compensated for a loss in the same tournament three years ago when a revision in the official scoring cost him the title by a half point after he had been accepting congratulations of his fellow aces for a half hour.

George Unger, also of New York, was second by a point and a half, leading Robert Appleyard, young New Yorker, by the same margin.

Dr. L. W. Lord, of Baltimore, whose 133 was high for the final session, came in fourth, with 608, a point and a half ahead of David Burnstine, of New York.

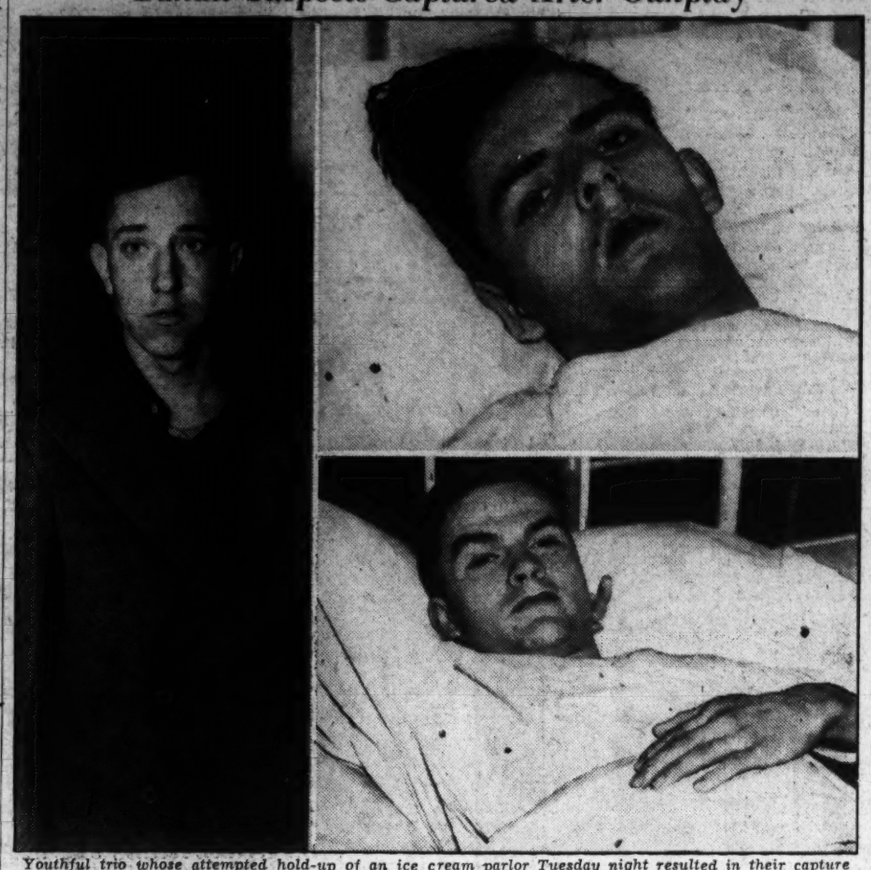
Bandit Suspects Captured After Gunplay



Youthful trio whose attempted hold-up of an ice cream parlor Tuesday night resulted in their capture after an exchange of shots with Detective John Caton, who was wounded. At left, William F. Thiebolt, 19, who commandeered a cab with his wounded companions, Louis Knight, 18 (upper), and his brother, William, 17 (lower), now in Gallinger Hospital with bullet wounds inflicted by Caton.

Environment Caused Holdup, Industrial School Head Says

All Washington now knows the story of what happened Tuesday night when three masked youths staged a holdup in an ice cream store at 806 Upshur street. Today, the boy bandits are well under the eye of the law. Ferguson Thiebolt is in jail. William Knight is in a critical condition at Gallinger Hospital, and his brother, Louis Knight, is fighting for his life in Emergency Hospital.

At Walter Reed Hospital is Detective John A. Caton, heroic policeman who surprised the trio in action and emerged from the consequent shooting scrape wounded four times.

But the story back of the story is not so well known. It stems from a background of misdemeanors, conflicts with authority, lack of proper supervision in formative years, inadequate mental make-ups and the age-old thirst for adventure.

"Never Had Chance."

A step by step study of each boy's background, in fact, furnishes a fair explanation of why the three embarked on a career of crime. Take 19-year-old Thiebolt, for example. Look at him for a few moments through the eyes of his aunt, motherly Mrs. Regina Holford, of 1105 East Capitol street, and you will see "a lovable boy."

"Fergy never was mean," she will tell you. "He was just unstable. But then, he never really had the chance he needed."

He was six months old when his mother died. Soon afterward, his father disappeared. "We never heard of him again until a few months ago, when we found out he'd died here in Washington," said Mrs. Holford. "Fergy went to the funeral—was all broken up about it."

Thiebolt lived with his grandparents for several years, though his grandmother was virtually an invalid and his gradfather was afflicted with paralysis. "Then I took him in," Mrs. Holford went on. "I had trouble with him from the first. He would run away from home, and he would steal things now and then. I had eight children of my own and was scared they'd copy his habits, so I finally had to turn him over to the authorities."

Placed in Foster Home.

The boy was first placed in a foster home, but continued to be difficult to manage. Finally, he was sent to the Industrial Home School on Wisconsin avenue. Earl W. Cassie, superintendent of this institution, discovered he was a fairly good worker if a task was selected for him.

Out of school and under the supervision of a case worker at the children's division, Board of Public Welfare, Thiebolt was sent to a CCC camp. A few weeks later he ran away. When found, he was at the home of his aunt, begging to stay. The case worker, Donald Brewer, agreed to this after the boy had obtained a job as a painter.

Requesting Mrs. Holford to let him know if Thiebolt had any further trouble, Brewer turned his attention to other cases apparently in much more need of help. "Fergy made $10 a week, and seemed to like this work," Mrs. Holford said. "He was getting along fine until about two months ago, when he lost his job. I thought he would get another one right away, so I didn't tell Mr. Brewer, but I kept right after Fergy to keep looking for work; told him I'd tell Mr. Brewer if he didn't. He got to staying away from home more and more in the evenings."

The Knight boys had been in trouble a number of times before. Back in 1932 they broke into a store and were caught. Since this was their first offense, they were put on probation after an unofficial hearing. An officer was assigned as "a big brother" to counsel them and look after them. In 1933 they were caught when they attempted to turn in a false fire alarm. Later, when they tried once more to break into a store, they were sent to the Industrial Home School for a year.

Cassie made arrangements to send Lewis to Gordon Junior High School. Later, the boy had to be withdrawn, however, because he failed in three of his studies. Some time later he and his brother made an attempt to rob a grocery store a few blocks away from the institution and were caught. Their term in the Industrial Home was lengthened, but both were released in 1936.

As Cassie sees it, the hold-up in which the three boys were implicated was "merely a symptom of maladjustment."

Robberies Confessed.

According to the confession, the two brothers broke into a filling station at 3500 Connecticut avenue northwest and a Sanitary at 2924 Fourteenth street northwest. William Knight and Thiebolt rifled another grocery on Benning road northeast.

Capt. Ira E. Keck said the youths had extended their crime wave over a period of more than a month.

Police said the three youths met in the Industrial Home School, from which they had been released in 1935 after spending a year for unlawful entry.

Their police records, which began in 1933, show many offenses. The Knight brothers have been charged with unlawful entry more than 40 times. William was placed on probation in 1934, when he was arraigned in Juvenile Court on 31 charges.

Manila Blaze Drives 10,000 From Homes

Loss Placed at $1,000,000 as Flames Destroy 1,000 Dwellings.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, April 7.—Fire destroyed 1½ square miles of flimsy residences in the Tondo section of Manila today, leaving upwards of 10,000 persons homeless, 1 dead, 11 injured and property damage estimated at $1,000,000.

A stiff breeze drove the flames through the densely populated area, which is in the northern section of Manila. Firemen were driven back for a time because water pressure was low and the lightly constructed dwellings ignited quickly.

Authorities estimated between 700 and 1,000 dwellings were destroyed.

The single fatality was a paralytic in a home for the aged. He died of fright as flames approached the home.

Relief agencies went into action immediately to relieve the suffering and homeless. Authorities said the fire was one of the worst in Manila's history.

Firemen, unable to stop the flames, called upon United States Army fighters from nearby Fort Santiago for help. When the fire reached the edge of Manila Bay the combined force brought it under control, four hours after it started.

Many persons had narrow escapes as they attempted to save personal belongings from the flaming buildings.

Great clouds of smoke poured from the burning area, attracting thousands of Manila residents to the fire lines.

Lady Luck Smiles, Then Frowns Upon Lottery Winner

First Lady Luck, a notoriously fickle person at best, smiled at Thelma Landy, colored maid, employed by Lieut.-Col. Howard Eager, 3513 Rodman street.

Then Lady Luck reversed her form, frowned and stuck out her tongue.

Thelma was informed March 16 that she had drawn a $3,000 lottery ticket. Yesterday she could not find it. She believes it was lost during a change of residence. She bought it while working at the Washington Home for Incurables, and forgot it until the drawing in Dublin. Then she learned she was among the winners.

Yesterday she offered $500 reward for the return of her precious ticket.

Virginia Gets Own Social Register in Rebellion Against Dictation by New York as to Who's Elite

An attempt to force a second secession of Virginia, this time from the anonymous authority of the Social Register, is in progress, it was learned yesterday.

The news came from Richmond in the form of a white slip announcing the first edition of "The Social Register of Virginia."

And Virginia's new register will not be like New York's Social Register—which is anonymous to the n'th degree.

Mrs. Clifford Randolph Caperton, who lives at the corner of Second avenue and Franklin street, at Richmond, is the editor.

The new tome listing the Virginia elite also will be unusual in that it will have an introduction—the author of which is Dr. Rosewell Page, Litt. D., LL. D. and F. F. V.

There has been sort of a schism between New York and Virginia in regard to social registers. It started during depression days when Virginians had their names in the Richmond edition of "The Social Register."

It was said that many Virginians dropped their subscriptions to this book, saying that "we do not have to have New York tell us who is social in Virginia."

At present numerous Virginians of sufficiently blue blood are listed in New York's Social Register as "dilatory domiciles," the book's term for transients.

Of course if history is consulted, there is much truth in Virginia's contention that there was society down Jamestown way long before the Indians thought they were selling Manhattan.

That's history. But there is a hitch in the fact that the New York people were first at the United States Patent Office ot register the title, with all rights reserved, including the Scandinavian.

News of Virginia's defiance was passed through a slot yesterday at the social register office in a downtown New York building, to a red-haired young woman who guards the gate.

"It's impossible," said the young woman. "There is only one Social Register."

She was handed the slip of paper which said the Social Register of Virginia was organized and ready to be issued in a de luxe edition, bound in genuine sheep leather with title and crest stamped in gold.

She shook her head.

"I'll have to refer this to the management," she said. "If you want to know anything more, write a letter. We never give interviews to the press."

Lindberghs Land At Munich Port, But Won't Talk

Munich, Germany, April 7 (AP).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh landed at Oberwiesenfeld airdrome here last night, but their whereabouts, unreported after taking off from Zagreb, Yugoslavia, was not disclosed until late today.

Airport officials of a dozen nations, including the Yugoslavian field from which the Lindberghs departed, had watched anxiously for the famous couple.

It was indicated the Lindberghs had no trouble on their flight. The Lindberghs had nothing to say.

D. C. Detective ShootsAnother; Is Suspended

R. E. Williams, of Second Precinct, Wounded in Jaw by Mahaney.

By John A. Singerhoff.

Detective Sergt. Michael Mahaney shot and wounded seriously his friend, Detective Richard E. Williams, Tuesday night on the Defense highway near Lanham, Md., it was learned last night.

Williams and Mahaney, both of the Second Precinct, were riding in Williams' automobile when the shot was fired. The bullet struck Williams in the chin and penetrated through his jaw to a point below the ear.

Mahaney was suspended from duty by Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson yesterday afternoon when he refused to tell his superiors anything about the shooting or why he was in Maryland with Williams at the time.

Williams was in George Washington Hospital last night under the care of a police surgeon. Hospital physicians expressed fear that an infection might set in which will endanger the detective's life.

Only meager reports of the shooting could be had at Police Headquarters. Despite the fact Mahaney was closeted with officials for more than two hours, they said he would give them no information.

Following the conference, Thompson asked Mahaney for his gun and badge

Inspector L. I. H. Edwards was the first police official to be notified of the affair, five hours after the shot was fired. Hastening to George Washington Hospital, where Williams had driven in his own car, Edwards said the man could not talk much.

Williams insisted, however, the shooting was an accident, Inspector Edwards said, and said Mahaney's service revolver was discharged by the jolting automobile while he was transferring the weapon from one pocket to another.

Mahaney could not be reached at his home after the shooting, police indicated, and he was not questioned until yesterday afternoon.

Violation of Rule.

Inspector Edwards said it is a violation of police regulations for any member of the department to leave the city limits without notifying and receiving the consent of his superior officer.

He indicated that neither Williams nor Mahaney had received permission and that their mission was not known to their superiors.

Thinking his companion critically wounded, Mahaney, Williams told his superior, left to find a telephone to summon assistance. While Mahaney was gone, Williams managed to pull himself together and drove to the hospital. How Mahaney returned to the city has not been determined.

Mahaney and Williams have been working in plain clothes in the Second Precinct for several years and have been good friends, their associates at police headquarters declared yesterday.

Mahaney, who is 40, joined the department in 1919 when he "ran a beat" in the Tenth Precinct. He was promoted to the rank of detective sergeant in 1932 and transferred to the Second Precinct, where he established a good record.

Williams, 33, was appointed to the force in 1927. He was promoted to precinct detective last year and went to the Second Precinct. Police there yesterday said Mahaney had taken the young detective "under his wing" and was helping him in every way.

Mahaney will remain under suspension pending the outcome of Williams' injuries, it was said.

Rule by 'Petticoat' Is Accepted by 2 Arkansas Towns

Denning, Ark., April 7 (AP).—Women candidates had a field day in municipal elections in two Arkansas towns, but accepted the victories with tongues in cheeks.

The men "wanted to shift the responsibility," a winning aldermanic candidate in Brookland (population 271) said. The town yesterday elected an all-feminine town council over male opposition.

At Denning, the 300 residents named a woman mayor, recorder and "alderwomen." The new mayor, Mrs. George Dixon, said "it was none of our doing. Someone placed our names on the ticket."

In Denning, Mrs. Dixon alone was opposed. She defeated the incumbent Mayor R. E. Shirley, who is father of the newly-elected recorder, Mrs. Raymond J. Higdon. Shirley's wife was elected to the aldermanic board.

Dentist's Wife Implores Judge To Be Lenient

Says Husband Never Could Say 'No;' Sentence to Be Passed Today.

been taken after a crowd of 1,000 gathered around the jail here on the night of March 3.

The confession read:

"I was tormented by Cleo Sprouse to help her out of trouble caused by her friends."

It described how he took the girl out to a lonely wood to perform an illegal operation; how she took "two or three whiffs" of chloroform, how she died before he could begin.

"Scared to Death."

"I was scared to death," the confession continued. "I didn't know what to do. I took her to the University of Virginia Cemetery and placed the body so it would appear to be suicide."

In an oral confession Fife said Dr. Miller denied he was responsible for Cleo's "condition," and denied he had ever had improper relations with her.

Cleo's Threat Cited.

Cleo's baby, according to the autopsy reports, would have been born in about 4½ months.

In another oral statement, Fife said, Dr. Miller told an officer Cleo had threatened him if he refused to perform the operation.

"He said," Fife narrated, "that she was going to tell people he was the child's father."

The courthouse, built in 1803 and a rendezvous for Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, bulged with spectators. Those who couldn't get in peeked through the windows.

Mrs. Lula Sprouse, mother of Cleo, sat on the opposite side of the courtroom from Dr. Miller and his wife and daughter. With her was Cleo's sister, Mrs. Alice Poole, who kept her eyes on Dr. Miller most of the afternoon.

Mother Indignant.

When it was first announced that prosecution and defense attorneys had entered an agreement whereby Dr. Miller would plead guilty to second degree murder and thus escape a jury trial, Mrs. Sprouse was indignant. She said she would insist he be tried by a jury for first degree murder.

Then, yesterday, it was announced she was satisfied with the procedure.

This morning she threatened to ask for a postponement of the trial, but when the proceedings got under way this afternoon she remained silent.

Dr. Miller's lawyers offered no defense except the letter of Mrs. Miller.

It was 3 o'clock when Dr. Miller emerged from the Albemarle County Jail and, surrounded by officers, started for the courthouse.

Shuns Photographers.

As he walked through a lane of staring spectators, he spied news photographers ahead and clapped a handkerchief over his face.

In the courtroom, Dr. Miller took a seat behind his four lawyers. His forehead was deeply furrowed and his eyes were cloudy. A few minutes later, he saw his wife and his daughter. Here control left him, and he began crying. Sobs convulsed him and tears streamed down his face.

Mrs. Miller rushed to her husband's side, clasped his hand and laid her head on his shoulder.

Elizabeth, their 18-year-old daughter, a co-ed at the University of Virginia, sat on the other side of her father.

As the two women began crying, Dr. Miller straightened up and began to comfort them.

Indictment Read.

Clerk of the Court Charles Moran read the indictment charging Dr. Miller with killing Cleo.

"What do you plead, guilty or not guilty?" Dr. Miller was asked.

In a low voice, Dr. Miller replied: "Guilty of murder in the second degree."

Judge Smith then called on the Commonwealth's Attorney to make his recommendation with regard to Miller's plea. Fife said when the dentist first confessed, he said the girl died while he was preparing to operate. He and the other investigators did not accept it at its face value.

They had tried to upset Dr. Miller's story, Fife said, but the investigation had corroborated it.

Seen Highest Penalty.

"We concluded," Fife said, "that the murder was committed in an attempt to perform an abortion.

"We are satisfied that murder in the second-degree is the highest penalty we could get under the law. Therefore we recommend that it be accepted."

Judge Smith, remarking on the ideas of some "outsiders" to the contrary, said he agreed with Fife. If the trial went to a jury, he said, he would have to warn the jurors against a first-degree verdict.

Court Hears Plea Of D. C. Attorney

Richmond, Va., April 7 (AP).—The United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals heard arguments today on the appeal of Jesse C. Duke, Washington attorney, from a District court conviction at Alexandria of attempting to influence action of a Federal grand jury.

Duke, now out on bond, was sentenced to four months at Camp Lee for allegedly handing a grand juror a sealed communication while the grand jury was considering a charge against him of harboring former Representative J. H. Hoeppel, of California, while the latter was a Federal fugitive.

The attorney was indicted on the harboring charge, but that case has not yet come to trial.

District Held Ready to Hike Tax for Relief

Citizens' Leader Writes House Group About 'Tragic' Situation.

To ease the "tragic" relief situation the citizens of Washington are willing to submit to increased taxation, Coleman Jennings told the House District Committee yesterday. Jennings is chairman of the citizens' committee on behalf of the unemployed employables.

His statement came in the form of a letter, in which he also said he was appealing to Congress because Washington is the only city in the United States without the right to provide for its own needs.

The Board of Public Welfare, he said, should be allowed $100,000 a month until June, and a total of $1,000,000 for the coming fiscal year.

Later in the day the committee was reorganized and renamed the citizens' committee for the unemployed. Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, canon of Washington Cathedral, was elected chairman, and Coleman Jennings, vice chairman.

The reorganized committee endorsed the District commissioners' efforts in behalf of the unemployed employables and also their demand for a deficiency appropriation.

They suggested, however, that the asked amount be increased from $130,000 to $170,000. This suggestion came as a result of yesterday's rapid shrinkage in the fund available for the aid of the unemployed employables.

Moscow, April 7 (AP).—Diplomatic molars ached with impunity today, for the police had arrested—for the third time in three years—the dentist who has been taking care of virtually the whole foreign colony, Vasili Samoilovitch Yudelovitch.

Some persons thought the reason might have been that he accepted foreign exchange in payment for his services.

President Gets Plan to Lower Retirement Age

Would Affect 433,000 U.S. Workers; Added Cost Set at $6,000,000.

Those now eligible for optional retirement at 68 would have the privilege four years earlier, those now eligible at 63 could quit on an annuity at 60, and those in the present 60-year optional class would be eligible at 58.

In contrast with the Neely proposal, the Civil Service Commission has recommended in its last two annual reports that optional retirement be provided at the age of 60 years for all employes with 30 years of service, but it would give the Government, as well as the employe, the option of terminating the employe's service. Compulsory retirement still would be provided at the age of 70. It would also make possible optional retirement at the age of 62 years for those with 15 years of service.

Basic Cost Held High.

The commission has reported that the "cost of the basic portion of the annuity for the employes in the lower age groups, especially in the 62-year group, is greatly in excess of that for the 70-year group." It added:

"The ultimate cost of the proposed changes will depend upon the average retirement age which develops in practice, but it is not anticipated that the added cost to the Government will be great."

In addition to the move by Alcorn's organization, Representative Ramspeck, of Georgia, said he had called for information on the cost of the Neely bill's plan, on the commission's proposal, and on numerous other suggestions that have been made for changes in the retirement system. He said he had not decided which of the proposals he would favor until he had received the data.

Alcorn said he had left with President Roosevelt a digest of facts in connection with mortality experience in various occupations which he said justified the differentials by occupations as provided at present and in the Neely bill. He termed his discussion with the President "very satisfactory."

Smooth harmony in drinks depends upon a gin that mixes

You shouldn't taste or smell the gin in the finished drink

WHEN your cocktail's really smooth, you taste and smell the cocktail, not the gin.

For this, you need a gin especially distilled for mixing. A gin that blends perfectly with the Vermouth, the orange or the lemon, just as each part in a singing chorus blends in perfect harmony.

The idea of a mixed drink is an American invention. It's natural, therefore, that Fleischmann's—the original American gin—should be distilled especially for this purpose.

Distilled from American grain—90 Proof. The Fleischmann Distilling Corporation, Peekskill, N. Y. Established 1870.

Ford Opposed To Any Dealing With U.A.W.A.

Will Recognize No Union; Announces Strike in St. Louis Plant.

protect industry from sit-down strikers.

Ford said he felt workers participating in recent strikes "have lost."

"They're being organized and had their freedom taken away," he said. "They'll pay money to the unions and get nothing in return."

Ford is just back from Dearborn, where he conferred with company officials during settlement of a strike in his plant at Kansas City Friday.

"We made no concessions," he said. "Our men know what we can do and what we can't do. We'll deal with them individually."

Meanwhile a wave of violence broke over the Nation's strike front.

Slugging and shooting marked a day of dramatic developments in industrial centers and legislative halls.

More than 100 girls were involved in a hair-pulling, dress-ripping clash at Dickson City, Pa., where strikers from Forest City fought employes of the Interborough Sewing Co. Superintendent Frank Baltimore reported 100 rifle shots were fired near the Zenith coal mines near Jamestown, Tenn. He attributed the sniping to gunmen endeavoring to intimidate 70 workers in the shafts. No casualties were recorded.

Fists and clubs flailed in a brush between pickets and non-strikers at the Darling & Co. milling plant in Cheektowaga, N. Y.

The Michigan Senate approved bills which would make sit-down strikers guilty of a felony and forbid employes to negotiate with sitters. The Texas Senate had already passed legislation providing imprisonment for sit-downers and a similar measure awaited the signature of Gov. G. D. Aiken of Vermont.

Settlement of the strike at the Chrysler Motor Corporation paved the way for the majority of the Nation's strikers to return to work. The corporation pressed plans for re-employing 65,000 after Chairman Walter P. Chrysler, C. I. O. Chief John L. Lewis and the United Automobile Workers Union negotiated an agreement ending a month-long dispute. Some 20,000 hands at automotive plants "feeding" the Chrysler factories also were expected to resume their duties soon.

Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan also obtained settlement of the strike affecting 2,200 employes of the Reo Motor Car Co., at Lansing, and opened conferences designed to terminate the controversy involving 11,000 at the Hudson Motor Car Co., in Detroit. Murphy asserted:

There is every prospect for a boom in industrial Michigan now.

As nearly 100,000 expected to resume their jobs in that State, President Homer Martin of the U. A. W. A. said the union had neither presented demands nor threatened any sit-down sieges in the Ford Motor Co. factories.

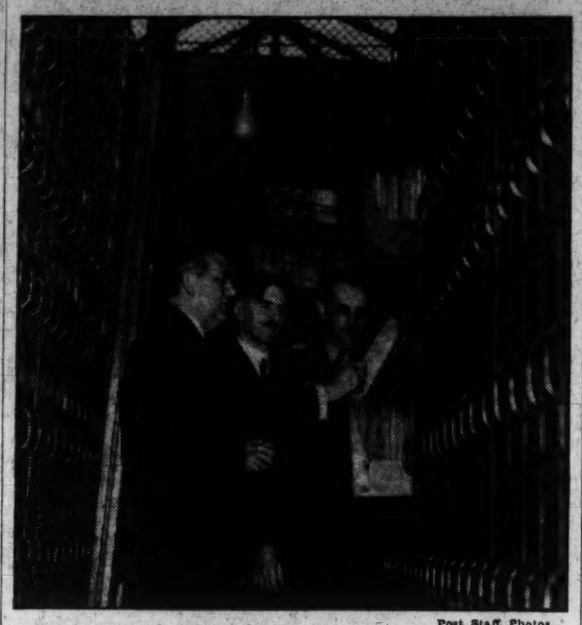
Adjustment of the difficulties in Michigan left few major disputes extant.

However, 11,500 employes of the Caterpillar Tractor Co. in East Peoria, Ill., were idle in a C. I. O.-sponsored strike for a written and signed working agreement. Squatters barred the gates while pickets were posted outside the big plant.

The same number of workers were on the strike sidelines at the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. in Akron, Ohio.

Warehousemen in the ranks of the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters in 10 Ohio plants declared a "holiday" as a demonstration of their dissatisfaction with an agreement between the union and the United States Potters Association.

Documents to Be Moved to Archives



Post Staff Photos.

Historic Dust Is Disturbed In Moving Congress' Papers

Yellowed Documents, Shifted From Senate Attic to Archives Building, Yield Treasure.

Careful hands, moving delicately and patiently, disturbed the historic dust in a thousand-odd filing-case drawers in the Senate attic yesterday, as the archivists began to move the old documents of Congress from the Capitol to the Archives Building.

The piles of yellowed papers, long buried in the drawers of the airless attic, exposed to the skylight-multiplied heat and the damp cold of a hundred Washington summers and winters, were transferred under the direction of James D. Preston, assistant administrative secretary of the National Archives.

Here, tied in faded ribbon, the century-old ink still legible on the parchment of another time, are the actual day-by-day records of the Congresses of the past. Here is the round and plump-lettered signature of President John Tyler on an appointment; in another drawer are the careful, awkwardly inscribed signatures of Abraham Lincoln on his messages to the Congress.

The documents, fumigated, dusted, humidified and unfolded patiently, are likely to include treasures of unwritten history for scholars. Their inaccessibility long has been a sore point with historians, anxious to check originals against later versions, and many sealed bundles, the unpblished records of hearings in almost forgotten court-martials and other cases, may throw considerable light on little-known aspects of history.

Atlantic Airline Test Crossings Soon to Start

Diplomatic Arrangements With Canada Perfected for Project.

Experimental transatlantic flights between England and New York City, in preparation for regular passenger service, will start "shortly," possibly within a month, Col. J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said yesterday afternoon.

He announced that "diplomatic arrangements have been perfected" between Canada and the United States regarding routes for the four-times-a-week flights.

According to Johnson, the route will be from New York City to Botwood, Newfoundland, north of Harbor Grace. From this "jumping-off place," giant planes will make the 1,900-mile hop to a point in Ireland, and from there to an English terminal.

The route from New York City to Botwood will be via either Montreal, where a stop will be made, or by Shediac, New Brunswick. The latter route would take passengers along the Maine coast.

Under the agreements, which probably will be signed today or tomorrow, licensing of aircraft in the service "will be only a matter of form."

Eventually there will be four crossings a week, Pan-American Airways and Imperial Airways, a British concern, each making one round trip.

According to tentative discussions, crossings will be made in seaplanes making about 140 miles an hour and carrying upward of 30 passengers. The trip would take about 24 hours.

An alternative southern route also has been proposed. This would be from New York to Bermuda to the Azores (or Lisbon, Portugal) and then to England.

the Bureau of Public Roads. The legislation has the indorsement of the Secretary of Agriculture, he said.

The District allocation, even if approved by the House, will not become operative until the fiscal year 1939, because the appropriation for next year already has been allocated.

The District would be required to match the Federal grant, as do the States, in order to obtain the additional money.

Two other local bills passed by the Senate have passed the House and will go to the White House.

One of these legalizes the operation of bowling alleys on Sundays after 2 p. m., while the other increases the authorization for vocational rehabilitation for World War veterans from $15,000 to $25,000.

Both have the indorsement of the District Commissioners.

The House District Committee yesterday reported favorably a bill to authorize the Interior Department to provide heat from its central heating plant to the small courts building now under construction in Judiciary Square. The District will pay a reasonable fee for the service.

Death of Souther Is Called Suicide

Los Angeles, April 7 (AP).—A coroner's jury today found the death from a bullet wound Sunday of Gordon Souther, 30, former Washington, D. C., corporation lawyer, was suicide.

The district attorney's office signed a release order for Mrs. Marian Souther, 32, the widow, who had been held since Souther's body was discovered in his apartment, a .22-caliber rifle at his side. Witnesses testified the Southers had been drinking.

Indiana, Pa., April 7 (AP).—One hundred employes at Indiana State Teachers College walked out today demanding higher wages, and co-eds took their places as chefs, waitresses and dishwashers.

N. J. State Senator Election Set Aside

Atlantic City, N. J., April 7 (AP).—Circuit Court Judge Wilfred H. Jayne today set aside as "fraudulent" the Cape May County State senatorial election which resulted in Republican William C. Hunt's being credited with a 437-vote plurality over his Democratic opponent, Jesse D. Ludlam.

The jurist observed it seemed "reasonably probable" that Hunt received more than 437 illegal votes, but made clear the actual number could not be definitely determined and therefore he had no power to declare Ludlam elected.

But you got to remember it isn't just William and Tom and me that's responsible for this extra grand taste our Family's Whiskey has got to it. That wouldn't be handing the proper credit to Grandpa Wilken and Pa Wilken. Spring Vacation For M. C.'s

Washingtonians will find in the following article in a recent issue of the Kansas City Times simple confirmation of an old, old story:

> Washington, March 30.—Kansas City was without a member of Congress today, the three members being out of town. Senator Harry S. Truman is vacationing on the Gulf Coast. Representative C. Jasper Bell is transacting legal business in Chicago. Representative Joseph B. Shannon is in Kansas City.
> Shannon said yesterday that in looking over this week's agenda of the House in Washington, he discovered its time would be occupied by measures applying to the District of Columbia, so he boarded a train for home. He expects to spend a week here.

When District bills enter the House Congressmen move out. The appearance of the local supply bill is a signal to go fishing, to try once more to break 100 on a favorite golf links, to catch up on correspondence or to visit the folks back home. So it has been ever since Congress became a city council for the District.

Of course, all the cities, counties and villages that receive visits from their Congressmen during consideration of the District bill must be delighted over the assumption that affairs of the Capital City require so little attention. If they are ever assailed by curiosity as to the result of this tendency to run out on the District, however, they will find interesting reading in Washington's high mortality rates and crime records.

Stung!

"Where's the state beneath the firmament," demanded Du Bartas, "that doth excel the bees in government?" And where the government, however Utopian, that doesn't have its malcontents? If not from without, trouble will come from within. Even busier than the bee is meddlesome man.

Consider the case of Dr. Lloyd R. Watson, of Alfred University, Alfred, N. Y. By giving a queen bee a shot of radium he hopes to make her progeny stingless. And what is that going to do to their perfect state? The whole blamed place is going to be fairly littered with drones. At present, according to ancient usuage, they just sting 'em and give 'em the bum's rush.

One may be strong for science and still have fears of its effects. Apart from the white-faced bumble bees the only stingless bees we have ever known were lifeless bees. Let the worthy doctor have a care or he may produce honeyless bees. To be a bee or not to be a bee; that is the question.

If the experiments prove successful, says Dr. Watson, according to an A. P. dispatch, "the United States might easily become a nation of stingless bees by 1940." So that's the prospect for the next Presidential year!

What should be done to a man who would deprive an ancient race of its constitutional right to carry weapons? He should be pelted with epigrams—flying epigrams with sugary beginnings and painful endings.

Get busy, Bees! Give Dr. Watson the needle.

Red And White Blues.

"For red may attract a man's attention, but it takes pink or blue to hold him."

Thus wrote Anita Loos several years ago, when gentlemen were still said to prefer blondes. But if Lorelei Lee were brought up to date, she would be found wearing virginal white. That is, if Miss Loos paid any attention to a poll conducted by the Daily Orange, of Syracuse University. Out of 20 college boys questioned, 15 admitted their favorite color for women to be white, with blue to place, and purple to show. Pink, tradition to the contrary, was scratched.

Last year a similar poll was conducted by a sophisticated woman's magazine. It revealed that men in the north like sirens while those south of the Mason-Dixon line hew not so strictly to the line but prefer the Maud Muller type. "Sweetness and neatness" were far down the list, while "sex appeal and vitality" surged upwards in the vicinity of Yale. But "cherchez la femme" at the University of Virginia meant simply that old favorite, The Woman in White.

It wasn't Wilkie Collins but somebody else, maybe Tom, who said of H. G. Wells that he "used to write novels about women who were super women. They were grand, but you could never make yourself believe that the men liked them."

Hereafter no author need have such a charge hurled at him. All that is necessary is more attention to the colors in which female characters are dressed, less to the ways in which they are repressed.

Japanese Textile Competition.

The long hours and low wages of Japanese textile labor have naturally become a topic for animated debate in the world textile conference now in session here. No doubt, as the discussion proceeds, the wisdom of broadening the terms of reference to embrace technical, economic and social conditions within the industry will be demonstrated. To deal intelligently with specific legislative proposals for improving the condition of textile labor it is essential first to examine the facts and understand the reasons for existing disparities in working conditions.

In dealing with the Japanese problem it is futile for competitors to denounce the low wages and long hours prevalent in that country. The first objective of this international conference is to find out why these conditions exist and the extent to which remedial action is feasible. The report prepared for the conference by the International Labor Office contains a large amount of data on comparative labor costs in various textile manufacturing countries. Anyone who examines this material with an unprejudiced mind will admit that there is no single simple solution for the serious problems created by the competition of cheap Japanese labor.

The ILO, for instance, estimates that on the most conservative basis unit labor costs in the Japanese cotton textile industry are about one-fourth those of other major manufacturing countries. Moreover, it is estimated that the percentage of Japanese labor costs to total production costs is less than one-half that of other leading nations.

Comparisons between Japanese and American wage rates are even more startling. Expressed in terms of Swiss gold francs at their old parity, the ILO states that the wages per hour of women spinners in our northern textile mills averaged 1.57 gold francs in 1933 while in Japan in the same year women spinners received only one-tenth of a gold franc for an hour's work. That is, the rate of pay here was more than 15 times as much as in Japan for the same kind of work.

Of course such comparisons fail to take account of the cheap food, housing and other forms of assistance that are really additions to the pay of Japanese workers. But even if liberal allowance is made for these items, and differences in living costs, the disparities in wage rates remain enormous. While higher pay in the United States is offset to some extent by the greater productivity of the workers, modernized equipment has greatly increased the productivity of the less-experienced Japanese workers.

There appears to be no doubt, therefore, that as a result of exceptionally low labor costs, aided by a heavily depreciated currency, Japan is in a position to undercut competitors' prices in world textile markets.

Yet the Japanese can with reason defend these low prices as an unavoidable evil based upon the necessity of finding new export outlets. Suffering from a sharp decline in the value of her raw silk exports Japan turned to the development of other export markets to supply the funds with which to pay for needed imports. Indirectly the United States has benefited from this expansion of Japanese textile exports through purchases of raw cotton for use in Japanese textile mills.

Nevertheless, the manufacturing groups directly affected by the increasing competition of Japanese textiles here and elsewhere have demanded greater protection. The result has been that Japan's success in bringing down labor costs has caused her goods to be subjected to restrictions of an extremely onerous and discriminatory character in all parts of the world. Those restrictions have taken the form of prohibitive tariffs, quotas and other limitations. Thus a vicious circle begins, with trade barriers adding to the pressure of lower production costs and the lowered production costs in turn leading to new trade barriers.

In the long run Japan has more to lose than to gain by exchanging the products of her cheap labor for the products of higher cost foreign labor. That is a form of subsidization of foreign consumers that impoverishes the exporting nation while it handicaps competitors. And eventually it is a policy that is defeated by insurmountable protective barriers. If the delegates to the world textile conference arrive at a better and more sympathetic understanding of these problems of a hard-pressed debtor nation they will have a real achievement to their credit.

The conference also provides an opportunity for further discussion between representatives of the American and Japanese textile interests. The recent visit to Japan of a group of American manufacturers has already resulted in a gentlemen's agreement regulating Japanese exports to this country. While such voluntary, unofficial bilateral pacts are of limited scope, they indicate that many problems of the industry can be solved if employers, workers and governments are all really anxious to find a solution for competitive maladjustments.

The present conference has been called to explore the possibilities of constructive action that will universally improve working conditions in the textile industry. By such means disparities in labor costs that are largely responsible for the disordered state of the industry can be reduced and programs for shorter hours and higher wages may become as practicable as they are socially desirable.

Toward Industrial Peace.

In two important respects the agreement between the Chrysler Corporation and the United Automobile Workers Union improves upon that signed nearly two months ago by the union and the General Motors Corporation.

On the one hand, the company has explicitly and without time limitation pledged its word not to "aid, promote or finance" any form of company union which can be regarded as a competitor of the C. I. O. organization. On the other hand, the union agrees that it will not cause, "or permit its members to cause," any "sit-down or stay-in strike or other stoppage in any of the plants of the corporation during the term of this agreement."

If this agreement holds, two of the major roots of present industrial difficulties will, so far as one big company is concerned, be eliminated. Thus the contract signed under the auspices of Gov. Murphy at Lansing on Tuesday night is not merely important in itself, but also as a potential model in the settlement of other disputes.

Abolition of the paternalistic company union where it is designed, or utilized, as a rival to independent unionism is unquestionably necessary for any real appeasement of present industrial unrest. And at least equally vital to industrial peace is the clear-cut pledge to refrain from sit-down strikes which the U. A. W. U. has made in the Chrysler agreement.

It now remains to be seen whether these pledges will be observed by both the contracting parties. Particularly important, in view of the waves of minor "sit-downs" which have followed the General Motors accord, is proof that the union will fulfill its promise to renounce this two-edged weapon.

On whether or not the union proves successful in living up to its plighted word will depend in large degree the future progress of industrial unionism in the mass-production industries. That form of unionism has amply demonstrated its great potential strength. It has still to prove that it has a sense of social responsibility commensurate with its power.

There is no doubt that John L. Lewis and his chief lieutenants in the C. I. O. movement are anxious to disown the sit-down technique. There is also no doubt that many of the rank and file, particularly those under the sway of communistic agitators, are eager to retain it.

The reason in both cases is clear. No responsible labor leader can afford to be associated with procedure which is frankly revolutionary in its implications. And no sincere revolutionist can afford to disown a method which, if thoroughly applied, would reduce the present social order to chaos in a few weeks.

In consequence the closest attention will be concentrated on the operation of the Chrysler agreement. If it works smoothly, with company and union both giving loyal observance to its provisions, a long step toward solution of current industrial problems will have been taken. If it is flouted by the union membership—as, apparently, the General Motors accord has several times been flouted—the C. I. O. will lose all of its present prestige and will serve chiefly as an excuse for fascistic reprisals by bodies of outraged citizens.

A great responsibility therefore rests upon Mr. Lewis and his colleagues. And it may be suggested that for this reason they will welcome the repudiation of sit-down strikes voiced by the Senate yesterday. The extension of this condemnation to include a general crack at other unfair industrial practices is all to the good. Of course the sit-down strike has been in part a reaction against reaction. But it was more than time to terminate a governmental silence which seemed to give consent to the illegal seizure of property. For that practice, while clearly conducive to Fascism, is thoroughly detrimental to all the interests of organized labor.

The Chrysler agreement, like that of General Motors before it, recognizes the U. A. W. U. only "as collective bargaining agency for such of its employes who are members of the union." The closed shop, at first demanded, is not approved. But with company unionism out this will cause far-sighted labor leadership no concern.

An orderly, responsible, progressive union, insured against unfair and surreptitious company opposition, will in time grow to be the sole bargaining agency of the employes. Only if the union is irresponsible will it fail to make headway to this end. And if it is irresponsible any steps toward making it autocratic would be disastrous from every viewpoint.

Taxes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The sales tax is one of the worst of all taxes for the reason that it falls most heavily upon those least able to pay. However, it does not follow that a tax should be levied in proportion to the ability to pay, notwithstanding this generally accepted idea. Raising money for public expense does not justify this method, any more than Robin Hood was justified in his robbery of the rich for the benefit of the poor. There is always a right way to perform every necessary public service.

Taxes should always be levied in proportion to equivalent services rendered to the taxpayer by the Government. This is in accordance with the same rational rule that applies in every business transaction. Its justice is unquestionable. Fortunately we have a formula by which to serve the purpose without any ingenious device of man-made law, but in accordance with a law of nature which is quite as immutable in its force and effect as is the law of gravitation. Henry George discovered this law and gave it to the world in his great book, "Progress and Poverty."

Pegler's "Weakness."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been an enthusiastic reader of Pegler's column, but now fear he is turning out to be just another H. L. Mencken.

Mencken, you remember, was the god of the prosperity era liberals, but when the depression came he was just a Liberty Leaguer. As a rugged individualist and iconoclast, he did an about-face rather than find himself with the common crowd.

Pegler, it seems, also can only be against things, whatever they are. One day he is verbally skinning the Fascist dictators in the way only Pegler can. The next day, he is murdering the only groups who, in this or any other country, stand as a bulwark against fascism.

I refer especially to his recent column entitled "Lawlessness," in which he viciously attacks labor unions, and "the coffee room philosophers, shaggy thinkers and flat-heeled intellects of the female auxiliary."

By these wildly irresponsible terms he apparently means liberals, progressives and radicals of all shades. But he especially excoriates labor leaders who "violate the property right of the company and the property right of the workman to his job." Now, if Pegler succeeds in prejudicing the middle classes against labor unions, liberals and radicals of all shades, who is going to stop fascism? The middle classes have been the storm troops of fascism everywhere, precisely because they did not understand labor unions or "coffee room philosophers."

Pegler obviously does not understand them, either. He claims to be against Faseist dictators, but his ideal seems to be a system in which labor unions, liberals and philosophers are barred, and only dumbbells who take orders without thinking are permitted. This is the Fascist ideal and practice.

In France, Blum is the world's "white hope" against fascism. And Blum's main support comes from labor unions and radical philosophers. If Pegler were writing in France, he would be undermining Blum and helping Hitler. Pegler's weakness is ignorance. He can be against but does not know what to be for. Too much of life was spent bellying up against bars, from coast-to-coast and from Maine to Florida. And they were not workingmen's bars. They were rendevous of the idle rich, race track touts, sports writers, hangers-on, and others not noted for deep or serious thinking.

Like a reformed drunkard, Pegler now denounces "bar flies," but he got his own erratic from them.

Ten to one that Pegler does not belong to the Newspaper Guild, the union of his own trade.

Call To Planning Commission.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The projected memorial to Thomas Jefferson conceived by Representative Boylan's committee and Mr. Pope has produced an illuminating discussion that, regardless of the outcome, cannot but raise to a higher level the appreciation and popular criticism of public architecture. Much has been said against the design of the building and the manner in which the architectural commission was awarded, but in the extensive correspondence you have published some points still seem not to have been considered.

The resolution under which the Jefferson Memorial Commission operates specifically exempts its project from the proper control of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. In consequence, while Representative Boylan may have consulted informally with representatives of the commission, the project has never been submitted for formal study and approval. This is a serious matter, and from this lack of planning control arise most of the disabilities of the present scheme.

The immense scale of the proposed memorial is hardly realized by most of your readers, and this disproportionate scale is of vital importance in the proper development of the west end of the Mall as a whole. The traffic problem the design will produce at the foot of Fourteenth street and at the end of Long Bridge will be an even more serious matter at the end of five years than it is today. A report must still be made by the engineers with respect to the foundations on which the proposed memorial will rest, and in the absence of such information it seems curious that a definite site was chosen and a design developed for that particular site in ignorance of its practicability. Finally, studies of Mr. Pope's scheme indicate that 90 per cent of the cherry trees surrounding the Tidal Basin will be destroyed if the memorial is erected as designed.

In the light of such considerations I believe that the interests of the form of the City of Washington as a whole, on which so much thought and so many millions of dollars have been spent, require that the memorial project should be submitted for the approval of the planning commission before funds are finally released for construction. This seems the only existing public machinery that can readily be used to check the more obvious abuses of the scheme.

'Collective Bargaining.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Current discussion of the labor problem would be much clarified if writers and speakers would define what they mean by "collective bargaining." The phrase is nearly as illusive of definition as "public opinion" or that other time-worn expression, "what the people want."

No thoughtful man can object to the workers in a factory in Flint or Detroit presenting their case collectively. Such action would be entirely healthful and salutary, and conclusions so reached would doubtless be satisfactory to workers and employers alike. But when it is the titular head of a national labor organization who speaks, in Washington or any other place, without knowing the conditions in a given factory, except second-hand through reports from undoubtedly prejudiced observers, quite a different problem is presented. No thoughtful man can wholly assent to any such disposal of so important questions as wages, hours of labor and working conditions.

Now, coming up to the alleged statesmen on Capitol Hill, what is meant by collective bargaining there? What does the President mean when he rolls out that phrase so resonantly in radio talks? Do these men mean "honest to God" collective bargaining between those hired and the hirers in a local industry, or do they mean sale of party power, hat and boots, to the politically incipient dictator who controls labor unions from an armchair in Washington?

It is not difficult to discern what Senate and House leaders in Congress mean by collective bargaining. Collective bargaining on Capitol Hill is assent to a process to secure and hold the labor vote. It represents nothing but political skullduggery of the lowest and meanest type. It is the mainspring of the political cowardice on the part of the Administration to wink at and secretly abet the "sit-down" strike and its illegal consequences.

This writer has been accused of being opposed to the claims of organized labor. He is not opposed to it; but he is very solicitous that labor should behave itself, keep within the law, and throw its ambitious and biased leaders out of the window. They are worthless rubbish in a society that harbors true democracy. When labor leaders set out to use organized labor as the means to wedge into the White House, it is time for that society to call a halt upon the activities of all aspiring dictators.

The Y.M.C.A. And Other Chest Members

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Y. M. C. A. and its works are being complained of by a writer. Some time ago another complainant kicked about the exorbitant charges of its employment agency.

This organization is apparently being assisted by the Community Chest fund, and this makes it a semi-public body. Its business is also to some extent the public's business. Let it come forward and give an account of itself. What does it accomplish? What does it pay its help? Does it do any outright charitable work? Are its charges as low as they could be? Is the place a house of refuge for unnecessary jobholders who have a pull?

These worthy people may be able to present an absolutely clean bill of health. But let them present it. The public is interested.

FRED VETTER.
Washington, April 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I subscribe fully to the sentiments expressed by William A. Brown in your issue of April 5. With the jobless in our city facing conditions so stark and hopeless that a huge mass meeting was called to lament the situation, we have the spectacle of agencies like the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., with their hotel business, cafeterias, newsstands and all the adjuncts of hostelries, with an added income from paying memberships, and large legacies and endowments, dipping into Community Chest funds that should be used to feed hungry infants and undernourished mothers.

Their secretaries and their assistants are well paid, as are also the Chest director and his large staff of assistants. We find this also in the case of the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts and clubs and day nurseries and loan associations and what-not that make up the allied charities floating the Chest flag.

Few of your readers know that the Chest dropped the blind from their budget this year so better provision could be made for the so-called character-building agencies. Character is built more securely on full stomachs, and these agencies are reserved for none who might be hungry.

Let's have a Chest concerned more with the plight of the destitute poor and the hungry and the underprivileged in our midst and less with the silk hangings in Y. W. C. A. windows and the quality of the bronze in Boy Scout badges.

The failure of the Chest to raise its quota each year, the vast number of pledges that are never paid after they are made, and the stupid show of high-pressure selling each November that discourages contributions should be object lessons to its well-intentioned sponsors that perhaps the fault lies with the Chest and not with the public. Many thousands of Washingtonians feel as Mr. Brown does. And each year their number is growing.

Addressing Scallops.

CASUAL SMITH and I were having a snack in a little restaurant, not more than a dozen squares away from the White House, where they serve scallops the way we like them, straight from the oven on a skewer stuck in a baked potato, the toothsome adductor mussels alternating with crisp bacon; and with lemon and watercress on the side.

* * * *

I see in the Federal Diary (said Casual Smith) that the Government is investigating Pecton Irradians following allegations that the shell game to which he is a party is not all it should be. In plain words the scallop has been so long accustomed to putting his best foot foremost that the populace has come to believe that that is all there is about him that is worth while; a supposition which science begs leave to doubt. In plainer words, the Fisheries Bureau, at the instance of the Federated Scallop Producers' Cooperative Association of Brooklyn, N. Y., is seeking to discover if there is anything marketable about that part of the scallop which is thrown away.

I take it for granted that there is such an organization as the Federated Scallop Producers' Co-operative Association of Brooklyn, N. Y. (amazing though the name sounds), for surely the Federal Diary would not fool us. But, in any case, the matter is worth considering.

Why should any part of a scallop be wasted? What do we do with the shells? Once upon a time the larger ones were used as cooking dishes. Oysters were cooked in them in a certain way and we called them scalloped oysters. And so with other edibles so cooked. We discarded the shells when other dishes became more convenient, but kept the name in the cook books.

And what about the animal itself in its little shell? Is there anything of it worth eating but its foot? Probably nothing the customer would be willing to pay for under existing conditions.

Under existing conditions. Note that. Waste is relative. Out on the prairies a pioneer killed a buffalo, cooked and ate the part that most appealed to him, toted what he could comfortably carry and left the carcass for the coyotes. It was only when the buffaloes grew scarce that this became sinful waste.

* * * *

The conservation movement began with the coining of the phrase "Waste not, want not." It applied to time as well as other things. The boy who picked up a pin had qualities which appealed to a would-be employer. The clerk who carefully untied the knots in string instead of cutting them put money in the pocket of the small tradesman. Neatness and painstaking care are just as important today as they ever were, but string is cheaper today than a man's time and pins are not always worth the picking.

The only rule the world has known that has come down the years unchanged and will remain unchanged until the end of time is the one that reads "Circumstances alter cases."

Wastefulness is only a sin when it entails a penalty. That sounds like putting the cart before the horse, but it isn't. We put no restrictions on fresh air, for there is plenty of it. We poison it occasionally (as you are doing now with that pipe) but we don't try to restrict production nor to limit the amount that may be used. But when we think we see in the distance the end of coal, of oil, of topsoil, of trees, of oysters and fish, we begin to make rules and regulations. Conservation is simply enlightened selfishness; for it is, after all, a kind of selfishness to seek to help those who will come after us.

* * * *

But more than conservation enters into our caring for the by-products, this determination of ours that nothing shall be wasted. There is the commercialism which has given us all the comforts we know and which, say what you will, and whether in praise or in blame, is the basis of our civilization.

There was accidental appositeness in putting "supply" before "demand" when the phrase was coined, for it was only with the arrival of our present competitive system that supply began to anticipate demand, and by providing things made people want them. Or, rather, let us say, it was long before the old truth came to be understood and acknowledged. Our grandfathers never felt the need of a radio set. Not one of us demanded that our candy and toothbrushes should come to us carefully wrapped in a transparent material. Pure science and empiricism are economic side-partners; and both are public benefactors.

The dictum which ends "to every man according to his needs" demands the addendum, "and may his needs increase!"

* * * *

Casual Smith heaved a sigh of content. "Just at the moment," said he, "I don't feel that I need a thing more. But you never can tell. The day may come when custom will make a man crave for something more than a smoke after a hearty meal. Right now science may be discovering among the discarded parts of the scallop something so valuable that no home will want to be without it. Then again they may discover nothing, and the unthinking will give them the laugh. But not us, me lad, not us! There are so many other things to laugh at."

So we went to a movie house and laughed at Mickey Mouse.

Forced Confessions.

ACCORDING TO the papers I read, the father of Veronica Gedeon, the little New York model who was murdered Easter Sunday, was questioned for 30 hours and emerged from this experience with two bruises on his nose. The bruises may represent fair wear and tear, although a man in police custody should be safe from accident and the burden of proof rests with the cops.

However, a 30-hour examination is nothing but an attempt to break down a man by main strength, and any time a confession is obtained this way it should be tossed out of court by the judge if the prosecutor hasn't the decency to spurn it himself.

Homer Cummings did this several years ago when he was the State prosecutor in Bridgeport, Conn., and made a celebrated case of a matter which in other hands might have been merely a routine killing and a cheap minor-league hanging.

Old Homer just smelled something, and though the prisoner had made a complete confession which dovetailed with the evidence, he set out to break down the confession and proved to the satisfaction of the court that the accused was not the man who shot Father Dahme.

• • • •

THEY NEVER FOUND OUT who did shoot the priest, but Old Homer definitely showed that the killing was not the doing of the man who had put his name to the confession. The prisoner was not too robust mentally, being neither a half-wit nor a heavyweight but just a little on the flabby side, and Homer told the judge that such a man might weaken under constant questioning and confess to every unsolved crime since the Cain and Abel case, just to get the cops out of his hair.

Old Homer also had to break down the expert testimony of several authorities on the pretentious but somewhat fallible, not to say phony, science of ballistics, and it was further necessary for the prosecutor to discredit the word of several casual informers and impugn the sincerity of at least one. The State prosecutor threw down his own case when he might have had a hanging.

He was much less confidential and explicit with the public in a similar course of action last year when he waived the prosecution of the income tax cases against some of Huey Long's gang in New Orleans.

In that case he merely said he had detected a change of atmosphere—a strange generality from one who in a previous case had been so careful to explain away apparent guilt. This nolle followed Huey's death and the political reconciliation commonly called the Second Louisiana Purchase and did Old Homer less honor than the other.

• • • •

HOWEVER, the Attorney General of the United States of America is definitely among those who doubt the reliability of confessions wrung from fuddled and frightened laymen in an atmosphere of steel bars, handcuffs, disinfectants and bulldozing suspicion.

The mental state of an inexperienced man yanked out of his home at night or grabbed out from behind his counter at the grocery store to face a lot of hard-faced bulls and a couple of tricky prosecutors of the wheedling, friendly type, hour after weary hour, is not good for justice or the man's own future.

By rights he ought to set his jaw, receding though it be, and refuse to say aye, yes or no to anybody on any subject, whatever befall. Legally he doesn't have to open his mouth, and even if he is to believe that he is only a witness, not a suspect, he will do well to keep a still tongue in his head, except, perhaps, to demand a lawyer. And he is wise to insist on a lawyer known to him or introduced by some trustworthy friend, just in case the attorney should prove to be another cop or prosecutor.

Though they slug him, starve him of food and tobacco and shine lights in his eyes when he is famished for sleep, he should remember that his life may depend on his resistance to torture and say nothing, for even one remark on the weather may lead to a babble and a confession which may be false.

Detectives are paid to get evidence, not confessions, and a 30-hour inquisition of any man is an admission of failure, if not proof of incompetence.

That will rob a divorce of most of the fun for some women. Imagine a wife getting a separation without the opportunity to say anything unpleasant about the old buzzard! Or vice versa.

• • • •

You can imagine the goings-on in a Little Rock divorce court:

Judge—You wish a divorce, madame?

Wife—Yes, Your Honor, and I wish you'd hurry.

Judge—Don't criticize the bench!

Wife—But I've never had to wait so long for a divorce before. I've been here almost five minutes.

Judge—What's your low for the year?

Wife—I got my last decree in three minutes flat in Colorado.

• • • •

Judge—Those Colorado judges use a fast watch. What's wrong with your husband?

Wife—Nothing. What makes you think there might be?

Judge—You're here for a divorce. What's your complaint?

Wife—I have no complaint and it's very mean of you to suggest such a thing.

Judge—But my dear lady, you must have some reason for a separation. Does he drink?

Wife—The darling! No.

Judge—Does he beat you?

Wife—Prentice beat me! How ridiculous!

Judge—Has he been untrue to you?

Wife—Certainly not. And I resent this court's insinuations.

• • • •

Judge—But he must be guilty of something.

Wife—Must I sit here and hear you insult the man I'm divorcing?

Judge—Now look here, lady, you're wasting my time.

Wife—Me wasting your time! How about my time?

Judge—You've gotta accuse him of something. If I'm going to give you a quick divorce I've got to have co-operation. Won't you be reasonable and accuse the old heel of something?

Wife (stubbornly)—I'd rather not.

Judge (pleadingly)—Aw, come on. Forget this extreme consideration for your husband for just a moment and charge him with some tiny-weeny fault. Just say that he eats crackers in bed, refuses to air the dog, never puts the soap back in the soap dish or something like that . . . please!

Wife (reluctantly)—Oh well, if I must. He's just plain no good!

Judge (beamingly)—Fine! Decree granted. See! It didn't hurt a bit!

Oh, Susannah!

Oh, my name is Johnny Kansas,
Long as dry as I could be.
And I'm off to get some beer

French Communism

Paris Correspondent Sees Reds Losing Grip Politically, Gaining In Labor Ranks; Fears No Revolution.

By Andre Vulliet.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

WITH a red bonnet on her head although conservative at heart, with a prodigal government and a thrifty population, dreading social agitation above all and yet giving in to street rioting, France is staging a show the end of which cannot as yet be foretold even by the best political observers.

After ten months of the "Blum experiment," it would seem that, socially and economically, France would be strong enough to adapt herself to her new social legislation of shorter hours, higher wages, collective bargaining and paid holidays. But this is not the case.

The French question mark is political. Is France turning communistic? What is French communism and French fascism? Is French democracy likely to prevail over these two forces in the end? Although no conclusive answer can be given, it appears that they will.

Fascism Declared Dead In France Today.

SO-CALLED fascism seems about dead in France. Its growth and development during the years 1934 and 1935 was a boon to all liberals and radicals of France, as it provided them with an anti-Fascist platform upon which they were able to agree. Together with the conservatives' inability to cope with relief problems and social reform, it was one of the main reasons for the "Popular Front's" victory last spring.

That victory ended the Fascist danger in France. Aside from the fact that one of the first decisions of the new Blum cabinet was to disband the Fascist leagues, thus killing their extra-parliamentary agitation, the efficiency and punch of Leon Blum's parliamentary methods reconciled a good many Frenchmen not only with democracy but also with the parliamentary system. It showed them—irrespective of their political opinions—that, provided a government has a consistent platform and a clear-cut majority to back it up, there can be plenty of action. It also showed the French that they are not so far from the two-party system as is usually contended. Such different parties as the Liberals, the Socialists and the Communists were able to draft a common platform and stand by it, like a bloc of solid "New Deal" forces against a scarcely less solid bloc of "anti-Popular Front" opponents.

This may have far-reaching consequences for the future of French politics, as what the liberals have done against fascism, for democracy's sake, they may well do against communism should the evolution of French communism prove dangerous for the French democratic structure. In this case, it would not be surprising to see them form a bloc of anti-Communist forces with other political parties.

Every political party in France is watching the Communists carefully as their attitude may bear heavily upon the future of French politics. What is in the back of their minds is one of the essentials of the present French situation.

Communists Shrewd To Build Up Strength.

WITH ONLY 285,000 active members out of a population of 42,000,000, the French Communist Party had to be very clever to gain the strong position it now occupies in French politics. It gave up the revolutionary man with a bloody knife in his mouth, it put aside the class struggle, the world revolution, the destruction of the family and all that. To allure 1,500,000 out of 11,000,000 French voters into voting for them, the French Communists became rather national-socialistic and campaigned for a "free, happy and strong France." But to keep these voters, they will have to be careful.

It is significant that in all the by-elections which have taken place since the general elections of last May, the Communists have lost about 30 per cent of their supporters. Their aggressive campaign for intervention in Spain, their relations with Soviet Russia and their possible submission to certain Soviet orders, the questionable part they played in the general strike movement which spread over France last summer—all that may have worked against them.

To make up for that loss of influence on the political ground, it appears that the French Communist Party is striving to gain control of the French Federation of Labor, the membership of which is between 4,500,000 and 5,000,000. It already has the building, railroad, metallurgical and textile unions well in its hands, which means control over some 1,800,000 workers. The Communists have also managed to get full command of the Federation of Labor organizations of Paris and its suburbs. They are slowly making headway in several provincial unions.

Such is the enigma of French communism. It is losing ground politically, and gaining prestige among workers. But even in the labor movement it dare not play too much politics.

The ultimate result will depend on how far French labor is ready to follow.

Romance Of Creed Attracted Many Members.

GENERALLY SPEAKING, French communism was—and still is—a great adventure. More than half of its supporters followed it because there was passion in it, because it revived old popular and revolutionary songs, because it organized spectacular mass and sport meetings where cycling and politics were mingled together and where the Communist leaders promised a more abundant life in a congenial and somewhat hot-doggy atmosphere. They cheered those leaders because they are young, active, strong and closer to the labor class than intellectual socialists. Maurice Thorez, secretary general of the French Communist Party, has a voice that could fill Madison Square Garden, given a crooner's megaphone. But even to the labor class, the very form of that more abundant life was, and is, of a bourgeois type: A "little" provincial place and a "little" garden where to retire with a "little" old-age pension to live on.

When supporting the Communists, the majority of them are for action, not revolution. They are against big capitalism, against the privileged few ("the 200 families"), against dictatorship, political, economic or financial, against the old political inertia. They are anti-capitalistic if you like, but at heart they are not anti-conservative. They stand for private property and bourgeois life. And if they cast in a red ticket it is just because they wanted a little more of that bourgeois life.

We remember a long argument with a taxi-driver whom we see every morning at a nearby stand. He plays about with the butcher's kids, while waiting for customers, and he is himself a family man with two children. "Well, Monsieur, believe it or not," he told us, "I voted for the Communists. And you know I am not one. But, 'il fallait que ca change.'" He wanted a change.

What he stood for, in fact, was no more nor less than the platform of the so-called liberals of France of 20 years ago. But this time he wanted it put into effect. And there is no doubt that by helping elect 72 Communist deputies out of 618, he scared the French government into action.

It would be untrue to say that all the French workers want is peaceful action and bliss for everybody. There are also swollen heads and agitators. And anarchists have appeared in the picture. Their forces are often accused of fomenting revolution in France. But it must be remembered that more than half of the Communist voters are not Communists, that 48 per cent of the French population is agricultural, that more than 70 per cent of French industrial or commercial workers work in factories or firms employing less than 100 persons, that there are some 700,000 independent French workers who run one-man businesses.

There may be enough class hatred and labor discipline in France, especially in Paris and its suburbs—and, we are inclined to think, only there—to start a revolutionary movement. But there is far too much conservatism and opposition to blood and hatred for the duration or even the temporary success of such a movement.

Mooney's Pardon Plea Again Fails

Sacramento, Calif., April 7 (AP).—The California Senate voted down 30 to 8 today an assembly concurrent resolution asking Gov. Frank Merriam to pardon Thomas J. Mooney. It was the second defeat for the San Francisco 1916 Preparedness Day bomb defendant in the Senate. March 16 it killed a resolution to grant Mooney a legislative pardon.

Missouri Rejects Child Labor Bill

Jefferson City, Mo., April 7 (AP).—The House of Representatives refused to ratify the proposed Federal child labor amendment today. The vote was 51 for to 74 against. It was the fourth time the Missouri Legislature had rejected the amendment.

Peacemakers And Pacemakers.

IF THE OUTLOOK for continued peace in Europe is today somewhat brighter than it has been, and that is the view of an increasing number of students of world affairs, little credit for this cheering development can go to the peacemakers and the peace agencies.

The vineyard of peace has been cultivated since 1919 with great vigor and assiduity. An untold number of efforts, great and small, have been made to organize the world on a sensible basis, politically and economically, with the evil spirit of insensate international rivalries exercised and the demon of war boxed in by paels and treaties and agreements. With seemingly unquenchable ardor the peacemakers have arisen from the ruins of one international conference to lay plans for the next.

There can be no doubt that in the long run their praiseworthy efforts are certain to bear fruit. For if the cause of international co-operation which the peacemakers and the peace agencies have so notably served all these years is at the moment in eclipse this is only a temporary phenomenon.

Indeed, even in these days of feverish nationalism, mutual suspicions and autarchy, two important international meetings are being held—the world textile conference, in Washington, and the world sugar parley in London. They are proof that nations still realize that there is a community of interest between them. In a close-knit world the international approach to a great variety of problems is as natural as it is inevitable.

• • • •

THE FACT nonetheless remains that however admirable their labors may have been in the past, and however useful they may be in the future, the professional peacemakers have not had very much to do with the slight improvement in the world outlook.

The peacemakers have, during recent months, been very quiescent. They have done little and said less for there has been very little for them to do or say. They had fought expansion in armaments tooth and nail in the past and had hoped that through collective efforts this burden weighing down the peoples and nations of the world would somehow be lifted.

But with the situation developing as it has been they found it impossible to stem the rising tide in their own countries and the world in favor of mounting armaments. Indeed it has not infrequently been the case that the most determined advocates of rearmament have been those who were formerly its most violent opponents.

In France, for instance, the greatest national arms budget in peace-time history is being sponsored by a Socialist premier and an all-left government. The Russian picture is even more striking.

• • • •

IN THE EARLY days of Germany's rearmament the western democracies sought to keep it within limits through moral suasion. It may, indeed, have been because they were in no mood to consider any offer of a general agreement, however reasonable, that the Nazi leaders decided Germany must leave the disarmament conference and the League.

Now Great Britain and France and every other nation are playing Germany's game. With the race in armaments universal, the advantage enjoyed by those who took the lead is rapidly ceasing to be an asset and becoming a liability. Battleships do not get old very rapidly but planes and tanks do. The very circumstance that Britain's rearmament program is getting under way now, while Germany's is nearing the peak, gives Great Britain an advantage.

Of course, the British statesmen, in justifying the contemplated military expenditure by their nation of $7,500,000,000 during the next five years, insist that part of the reason for saddling so back-breaking a load on the British people is because of Great Britain's commitments under the League Covenant. But the only time in recent years that the British government, under presure from an aroused and militantly pro-League public opinion, showed any disposition to make collective security a living force, it was ultimately frightened away.

It is doubtful if the experiment will be tried again soon. Great Britain is the classic land of ceremonial survivals. In the future as at present, British statesmen are likely to render lip service to the Geneva organization as the "sheet anchor of British policy." Yet no one can deny that whatever Britain's motives may be in launching its record-breaking rearmament program it constitutes today a factor making definitely for peace. The important thing is not why the British lion is growing a new set of claws but that it is doing so. Britain as peacemaker may indirectly but none the less vitally be Britain the peacemaker.

• • • •

BESIDES British rearmament several other developments are responsible for the change, slight though it may be, in the tide against immediate war.

These are, among others, the defeat of Japan's puppets in the fighting at Suiyan, which blocked Japan's efforts to cut a swath between China and Russia; the strong stand taken by France against German penetration of Spanish Morocco and the weakness displayed the Italian forces in the recent fighting in Spain.

With none of these crucial developments did the peacemakers have anything to do. During these months the peace agencies have performed only their routine tasks. It may be their turn again soon. But it was meeting force with force that frightened off the would-be aggressors from launching any ambitious programs of conquest. The fact that Europe generally remains at peace is not the direct result of efforts to preserve it, but the by-product of militant efforts. This is not the least paradoxical aspect of our times.

A Friendship

By William Lyon Phelps.

Moody and Drummond.

Religious people who cannot get along with other religious people because of divergent views on the Bible, on theology, or on certain dogmas, could profitably consider one of the most intimate and yet one of the strangest religious partnerships on record, that of the evangelist Dwight L. Moody and the professor of science, Henry Drummond.

I believe they never asked each other for a statement of belief; Moody was an absolute Fundamentalist and Drummond was a professor of science. But they were as close as Moody and Sankey—Moody talked and Sankey sang; neither tried to do the other's work. I often saw Moody and Drummond standing on the same platform, working for the common cause. It was a fine object lesson.

• • • •

I have just been reading an interesting article in the London Spectator, by Edward Shillito, called "What Moody Stood For." It was written in memory of the hundredth anniversary of Moody's birth, which occurred this year. Moody was what I should call a religious statesman; as it is the duty of a statesman to keep his country alive as long as possible, so Moody healed all differences that threatened the advance of religious work. In this article, Mr. Shillito says that when Moody came to Scotland there was such a fierce quarrel in the church that a crisis had developed which might have broken the church to pieces. And he quotes the famous writer, Sir Robertson Nicoll, who said that the church was saved from this terrible danger "due to the influence of one man—the American evangelist, Mr. Moody."

• • • •

What Mr. Shillito says of Moody and Drummod is interesting "Through the story of that age Drummond moves like a knightly soul who in other ages might have been a Bayard or a Sidney . . . He had been looking for something more scientific in Christian methods . . . He found it in Moody's meetings, and especially in his personal dealing with the sick of soul. In the interviews which followed the large assemblies Drummond and Moody became fast friends. Moody saw in Drummond, young and inexperienced as he was, the very man he needed. He gave to him great tasks at once. And in this way the Mission was able to cover new ground; and Drummond began a service to youth which ended only in his death."

And it did not end then.

Church In Mexico

Old Sore Reopened By Incidents In Vera Cruz And Chihuahua, As New Head Of Catholic Church Is Appointed.

By Jeffrey Paul.

Special Dispatch to The Washington Post.

Mexico, D. F.

THE CHURCH QUESTION, Mexico's most famous "skeleton in the closet," rattled its bones last month and set the country to wondering what would happen if the people of Vera Cruz and Chihuahua did not get what they asked for—open churches and the punishment of murderers.

In Orizaba, Vera Cruz, a priest said mass in his house and the police rushed in, broke up the services, dispersed the worshipers. Many people fled, among them Leonor Sanchez, a 14-year-old girl. Unfortunately, one of the policemen fired at the crowd and wounded little Leonor. She died a few hours later and the news of her death ran about the country like wildfire.

Crowds from Orizaba and the nearby town of Cordoba carried Leonor Sanchez to her grave, wired the president, wired Gov. Aleman, heard speeches of protest from men and women who had been silent on religious topics for five years. In the days of Gov. Adelberto Tejeda, a law was passed in the state legislature, forbidding any priest or minister of any religion to exercise his office. This was a direct violation of the federal constitution, but the governor was close to Calles and nothing could be done.

Governor Conferred With President Cardenas.

GOV. ALEMAN, inducted into office shortly before the Orizaba incident, listened to the complaints of his constituents, and then made a trip to Mexico City to confer with President Cardenas. So far, no one has mentionend what was said there and no official statement was forthcoming from either man. The governor returned to Jalapa, the capital, and told various delegations that the question must be settled with prudence and not in haste.

In the meantime, Lombardo Toledano's Confederation of Mexican Workers accused the rival organization, the Regional Confederation of Workers, of using the religious trouble as a cloak to attack the Toledano policies. In order to check his rivals, Lombardo called on his union members to stage a giant demonstration in various Vera Cruzan cities, demanding that the churches remain closed. When the workers turned out in rather small numbers and when rumblings of discontent were heard from their ranks, Toledano's chieftains told them that the confederation had no wish to attack religion; but it warned the workers that religion was being used "as a cloak by the reactionaries."

From the port of Vera Cruz, from Cordoba, Tampico, Jalapa and other cities came reports that the people had attempted to open churches closed since the Tejeda law went into force. In some cases, federal troops repulsed them, never, however, firing at the crowds. It is understood that President Cardenas had ordered the troops not to offer violent resistance, but to avoid bloodshed at all cost. At the present time, parish groups have had church keys returned to them by the authorities of many cities and this has served somewhat to relieve the tension.

Death Of Priest Adds To Resentment.

WHILE THE COUNTRY was still excited about the flareup in Vera Cruz, another incident provoked further indigation when it was learned that a certain Father Maldonado, S. J., had been killed in the town of Santa Isabel, in Chihuahua.

As the story went, the municipal president of the town, accompanied by 20 armed men, went to the priest's house and accused him of having urged people to burn down the local "Socialist" school. The priest denied the charge, but was attacked and beaten by the municipal president and his companions. Transferred to a hospital in Chihuahua City, the priest died of his wounds and the perpetrators of the attack were arrested and imprisoned.

No paper in the country followed the Maldonado case so closely as La Prensa, a journal that can in no wise be called conservative. Its dispatches brought out the fact one of the teachers in the destroyed school had been present at the beating of the priest and had implored the municipal president not to continue the attack. According to her, the teachers themselves were responsible for the fire, one of them having knocked over a brazier, the resulting flames getting out of control before aid could be brought.

The teacher told the same story to the authorities who investigated the priest's death.

Michoacan Coadjutor Succeeds Archbishop Diaz.

IN THE MIDST of the Vera Cruz-Chihuahua troubles, word came from Rome announcing the appointment of the Most Rev. Archbishop Luis Martinez y Rodriguez, coadjutor of Michoacan, to succeed the late Archbishop Diaz as head of the Mexican church. Although well known for his close association in the Michoacan diocese with the exiled apostolic delegate, Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, the new appointee was not looked upon as a leading candidate for the archepiscopal see of Mexico.

Archbishop Rodriguez received his entire ecclesiastical education in Mexico and is known as an authority in canon law and theology. His sole European connection seems to have been a trip to Europe and the Holy Land, taken many years ago. His first interview with reporters was marked by kindliness, affability, and a willingness to talk. At the same time, he begged to be excused from making any statements touching relations between church and state. He said that unfamiliarity with many phases of the problem made him refrain from speaking and that he would say nothing along these lines until his return from Morelia, his cathedral city, where he has gone to wind up diocesan affairs before assuming his duties in the capital.

Those who like to pretend they have the "inside" on everything that happens in Mexico profess to see a connection between Archbishop Rodriguez's appointment and the fact that both he and President Cardenas are natives of Michoacan. While this may be true, and while it is known that the President has never attempted to hide his high regard for the older man, closer observers of the facts do not feel that the appointment will have much effect in bringing church and state into closer agreement.

It is very true that President Cardenas is anxious to keep the old problem from becoming a bleeding wound in the side of his administration. It is quite another thing to expect a man of his professedly radical tendencies to risk the work he has done to hold divergent political elements together by making any overtures designed to make things easier for the church.

No Trials Yet Held For Suspected Murderers.

SO FAR, the persons accused of the Sanchez and Maldonado murders have not been brought to trial. The people of Vera Cruz, judging by their telegrams to the President, have complete faith in the chief executive's sense of justice. They seem to feel that he will see to it that the accused are brought to book and that the churches will be allowed to open under the provisions fixed by the federal constitution. Already Father Flores, the priest from whose house Leonor Sanchez fled on February 7, has applied for permission to exercise his religious office, and his request has been referred to Gov. Aleman by the city council of Orizaba.

Unbiased observers and, when privately questioned, government officials themselves, admit that the church question in Mexico, as stemming from the Calles-Obregon regime, has been little more than a political football. La Prensa has revived interest in the sensational death of Father Pro and his companions, shot in 1927, for a supposed attempt on Gen. Obregon's life. In addition, it has been printing new testimony in regard to the killing of President-elect Obregon by Leon Toral in 1928.

It has long been rumored that political, as well as religious, intrigues were responsible for Obregon's death. The official post-mortem port, reprinted by La Prensa with a sketch, shows that the famed Sonoran had no less than 19 bullet wounds in his body! Toral, it is said, fired six times. Where did the other 13 wounds come from?

Conversation with churchmen and leading Catholic laymen reveals no disposition on their part to embarrass President Cardenas by dragging before the public the festering sores inherited from the Calles regime. Most of them ask only that the federal law on worship be enforced in states where it has been hidden beneath local legislation which absolutely forbade any churchman, of whatever denomination, to exercise his office. Vera Cruz, Tabasco and Chihuahua were conspicuous examples of this kind of law-making.

Should the President show his willingness to carry out the constitutional provisions in this regard, as he has in others, church and state relations, while not perfect, would move along in better fashion than they have in the past ten years.

7 Germans Face Nazi Court on Treason Charge

4 of Accused Are Catholic Youth Leaders; Red Activities Hinted.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 7.—A Nazi-chosen people's court today placed seven Germans, four of them Catholic youth leaders, on trial for high treason, charging them with subversive attempts to form a Communist-Catholic united front.

Chaplain Joseph Rossaint, of the Dusseldorf Youth group, was the leading figure among the seven defendants. Proceedings started behind locked door.

Official charges accused Rossaint of co-operating with the illegal Communist Party from 1933 until January, 1934, and asserted other defendants, Chaplain Karl Kremer Zu Remscheid, Chaplain Franz Steber, leader of the Catholic Young Men's Association, and Jacob Clemens, the association's general secretary, tolerated meetings of Catholic leaders with Communist functionaries.

Two defendents were identified as Peter Himmes and Hermann Juelich. The seventh was not named.

Himmes and Juelich were alleged go-betweens connecting Catholic leaders with Communists.

Official reports disclosed Clemens became secretary of the Dusseldorf Association in 1924 and edited papers for the secular and spiritual guidance of youth leaders.

Rossaint, who had been conducting a Bible class at Oberhausen for unemployed, was induced to join Clements in his Catholic Youth work.

Kremer Zu Remschied was charged with spreading "peace propaganda" through the "Peace Union."

Rossaint and Himmes were accused of storing treasonable Communist propaganda pamphlets, and Rossaint was alleged to have given financial support to the Communist Schwippert, who fled to Holland.

Farmers Win Bloody Clash, Evict Strikers

1,000 Sit-Downers Driven From Hershey Factory; 25 in Hospital.

waving his arms, his face flushed. "Listen, gentlemen—and others," he screamed. "Come on, come on, down to the factory!"

With a roar the crowd made for the exits. Men grabbed clubs, bars, sticks and banners that were stacked all over the arena.

Clubs, Flags Waved.

The crowd swarmed down the road, many running, waving clubs and flags.

At the factory, strikers looked from the windows. Several hundred, mostly boys and girls, paraded snake-dance fashion on the flat roof, singing and shouting, college-yell fashion.

As they saw the crowd coming over the hill, the strikers ran from the windows and barricaded the doors.

Down the main street of Hershey—Chocolate avenue—the marchers came, joined by crowds in the streets. Street cars and automobiles were halted.

At the factory the marchers broke into a mad scramble for the door. Inside they swung right and left; so did the strikers. The shouting could be heard in the street.

A few minutes later, the first of the bruised and bleeding sit-downers were led from the plant, their hands held high in token of surrender.

Some of them had to be assisted.

Pelted by Crowd.

From the factory the strikers were driven through a narrow path through the crowd. They were pelted with sticks and pebbles. One trucker threw coal at the strikers. He was joined by spectators. Others threw ashes. A woman, beaten on the head, was carried screaming from the plant and taken home.

Men grappled in pairs and groups fought blindly. The strikers who paraded on the roof attempted to get down to help their fellows; some tried to find a haven on the same roof. These struggling groups jammed in the opening to the roof.

Scores of men and boys in the streets joined the opponents of the strike. The sit-downers were outnumbered and soon surrendered.

In less than an hour the last striker had been removed.

The victors climbed to the roof, where they waved to the crowds in the streets that the fight was over. They unfurled flags from three poles. The crowd cheered.

Just before the fight ended, a detail of about a score of mounted State police arrived. They drove the crowd to a safe distance from the factory and cleared the streets.

For more than an hour after the disorder, nonstrikers and farmers paraded about the plant, still clinging to their weapons.

The floor of the plant was strewn with hammers, clubs, picks, long knives and other implements.

The management of the Hershey company said they could not estimate immediately whether any serious damage had been done to the equipment.

John Loy, business manager for the Chocolate Workers Union, refused to talk in the hospital while his battered head was being swathed in bandages.

"I haven't any idea what our next move will be," he said.

Loy later issued this statement:

"We had negotiations this morning at which time Mr. Murrie (William F. R. Murrie, president of the company) told us that if we would leave the plant they would consider further negotiations.

"We agreed to do that. We were on our way out when we saw that the crowd was closing in on us and we rushed back. The fighting took place inside the plant.

Says Officer Opened Door.

"Half an hour before the violence occurred Russell Behman (president of the union) and I were in Mr. Murrie's office. We asked him to call off the crowd or we would put the entire blame on him for any violence.

"A. G. Heilman, superintendent of the chocolate corporation, opened the door from the inside while the farmers were battering on the outside with a pole."

Alexander Stoddard, company spokesman, said farmers would be assured of a market for their milk almost immediately. Farmers are to bring their milk to the plant tomorrow.

Stoddard said it would be two days before the plant would be reopened. Members of the Hershey American Legion Post were deputized to guard the plant.

Because their market for 800,000 gallons of milk daily was cut off by a sit-down strike in the Hershey Chocolate plant at Hershey, Pa., farmers joined "loyal" workers in march on buildings occupied by the strikers, whom they evicted.

Senate Votes Sit-Down Illegal In Compromise

Resolution Adopted, 75-3; 'Spy' System, Company Unions Assailed.

denberg (Republican), Michigan, who said he thought it went "too far" and sweepingly condemned all company unions. He contended all company unions are not dominated by employers.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, and Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, sided with Vandenberg, but an amendment by Bridges to clarify the language was swept aside.

Bridges thought the condemnation should apply only to employers who "dominate or interfere with the function of any labor organization, or contribute financial or other support to it."

Opposed by Norris.

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, coauthor of the Wagner labor act, insisted there "aren't any other kinds of company unions." Wagner said he was willing to condemn only "company-dominated and controlled unions," but this was not acceptable to Senator George W. Norris (Independent), Nebraska.

Renewing the fight he made to amend the Wagner act to free organizing workers from coercion "from any source whatsoever," Senator Tydings argued the proposed resolution would prevent an employe from joining "any kind of organization he pleases."

"I don't care who dominates the union," said Tydings. "Suppose the men vote to join a company union?"

"Right to Coerce" Cited.

Tydings charged those who brought about the defeat of his Wagner act amendment, giving workers the right to join any union free from coercion from any source, "did want the right to coerce the laboring man to join their organization, whether he wanted to do it or not, and that was the underlying reason why the laboring man was denied the American right not to be intimidated and coerced from any source whatsoever."

Senator Robinson said the resolution was aimed at industrial practices uncovered by the La Follette committee, whereby "spies" were infiltered into labor unions, "causing the discharge of thousands of workers."

"There is nothing more unfair," Robinson said, "than to hire thugs and private detectives and prompt them to join the union and worm their way into the hearts of workers."

Vandenberg said he favored denunciation of the so-called "spy" system, and was aware some company unions had been used to break self-organization, "but I am wondering if this language doesn't go too far and apply to all company unions."

Both Robinson and Senator Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, opposed McNary's move to require Presidential signing of the Senate measure by making it a joint resolution.

"I favor putting all of the force behind it that can be marshaled," said McNary. "And amendment making this a joint resolution will not merely express the opinion of Congress, but of the Administration and the Federal Government."

Robinson said he would oppose "giving any resolution we pass the effect of law," or going beyond a declaration of the policy of Congress.

"I do not mean to imply that the President would veto it, nor do I say he would approve it," the leader said.

In the end, the resolution was adopted without change.

The controversy will be renewed in the House today, where Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas, is sponsoring a congressional investigation of sit-down strikes. A small bloc of House "liberals" yesterday went on record against the Dies inquiry, claiming it would assure only a "one-sided" investigation.

after Easter to see what I knew of him."

"Day before yesterday they asked me for samples of sculptors' soap. They had questioned me particularly about that before. They said the stuff was found in the Gedeon apartment and wanted to know what it was and how it should have come there.

"I suggested the murderer may have made a mask of one of his victims, probably 'Ronie,' and pointed out that adhesive was found on her neck.

"But the soap, I told them, was especially important because we use a certain kind of dark brown sticky soap to prevent the plaster from sticking to the skin."

Mask-making, Ettl explained, is a common phase of artists' apprenticeship. In commercial art, the principal use of the process is in making records of features of dead persons for their families to keep, and a mask costs from $50 to $100.

As the slaying mystery neared its twelfth day, there came from President Laurens Zelye of St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y., where Irwin was enrolled for a few weeks, the allegation that Irwin was being "damped without evidence" and was known at the college as "an industrious, hard-working boy."

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Reading and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess fatty tissue. In much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist. ADV.

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937

By Bob Burns.

I don't know why it is that you hear so much about complainin' wives, but very seldom about complainin' husbands. When it comes right down to fancy and assorted complainin', the husband has got the wife cheated a thousand ways. The poor wife gits blamed for everything. My Uncle Squincey was one of the worst wife-blamers I ever saw. One time he was layed up with the rheumatism and I suppose he suffered pretty bad and one time when Aunt Flutey went in to see him, it made her feel so bad to see him sufferin' that she started to cry. Just then a friend came in and he asked my Uncle Squincey how he was gittin' along and Uncle Squincey says, "Oh, terrible!" He said "The doctor told me to avoid dampness and here my wife comes in here and cries just to make it more moist in the room!"

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Hari-Kari

A rattlesnake that chose its own poison and death (or maybe it didn't) to capture at the hands of a crowd of men is probably a tale they tell even now in the cool of the evenings out in the mining country of California . . . It was told here yesterday by Ellery A. Foster of the Forest Service, one of the men who witnessed the suicide, the strangest thing a snake has done since the first one upset the order of things in the Garden of Eden . . .

It happened in the cool of an evening . . . Foster and a crowd of others discovered the rattler and surrounded it . . . They bedeviled it with rakes and shovels and the rattler struck back . . . The rattler struck his fangs against the metal of the shovels and rakes and found it unavailing . . . The rattler tried to find a way through the encircling men, but couldn't . . . This went on for a while and, one guess being as good as another, the rattler decided to give himself up . . .

But not without one last strike at a rake . . . Then the rattler turned on himself and sank his fangs into his own body . . . Foster recalled that the rattler's jaws contracted viciously as he gave the death bite . . . And he remembered that the rattler's body shivered and quivered mightily as if the rattler had no stomach for his own poisonous dose . . . Death resulted in a very few minutes . . .

Now Foster, 31 years old and the youngest division chief in Forestry, knows a lot about the things of the outdoors, but he never had thought of a snake committing suicide . . . It may, in fact, be the only case of a snake committing suicide . . . Again, it may not be the case of a snake committing suicide at all . . . Foster has thought deeply on the thing and one possibility—to shatter the suicide theory—is compelling:

It is possible that the snake, finding the shovels and rakes invulnerable against his strikes, suddenly whirled in search of something that was more fleshy . . . The first thing that loomed was his own rear parts, and being pretty unfamiliar with his own appearance, the snake just bit what he saw . . . This, aside from being a snake story, undoubtedly must contain some moral, which we don't feel just now like figuring out.

Among Those Glad:

The Department of Justice, the Treasury, the Postoffice Department and the War and Navy Departments are all glad . . . The reason: Because of the moving of the Interior Department into its new building . . . All the departments that are glad will have more room now, because Interior had poked its personnel and affairs into their quarters, cramping the space.

Says Interior's spokesman: "A complicated problem of unscrambling space in various Government-owned and leased buildings faced the Interior's Space Control Division in connection with the move, now under way, to the new building. As worked out, space amounting to approximately 300,000 square feet in Government-owned buildings and 175,000 square feet in leased buildings will be vacated and reassigned to other activities or released to the owners for private use. There will be a substantial saving in the Government's annual rent bill as a result." And this being the case, the taxpayers might be included among those listed as glad.

"Neutrality" will be discussed by Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman, Senate Munitions Committee, at 8 o'clock next Wednesday evening in the Interior Department Auditorium . . . His appearance is sponsored by the unions of employes of the Social Security Board, Farm Credit Administration, Railroad Retirement Board, Securities and Exchange Commission and Public Assistance Division.

Leo K. Couch, biologist of the Biological Survey, will direct the co-operative wildlife research and management projects—under supervision of the survey—at land grant colleges in Virginia, Alabama, Connecticut, Iowa, Maine, Oregon, Texas, Connecticut, Ohio and Utah . . . He will be an assistant in the section of wild life surveys of the division of wild life research . . . Meet Mr. Couch: He was graduated from Oregon State College, 1918 . . . Joined the Biological Survey, 1919, as a biological assistant in rodent control work . . . In 1929 was placed in charge of the bureau's predator and rodent control work in Washington State . . . While there he supervised administration of the bureau's nine migratory-bird refuges and was chairman of the wildlife committee of the State Planning Council

School Board Removes Ban On Magazine

Scholastic, Disapproved Recently, Is in Good Standing Again.

Gilligan, Mrs. Smith Lead Fight; Periodical Once Called 'Pacifistic.'

Scholastic, the periodical banned from public school use last fall for its alleged pacifism, is available to Washington school children once more, as a result of school board action yesterday rescinding earlier action.

By a vote of 7 to 1 the board voted to lift the ban. Then by a vote of 6 to 2 members placed it back to its former position on the approved classroom reading list.

Mrs. Phillip Sidney Smith and Henry Gilligan, both of whom voted to ban it last fall, led the move to restore Scholastic.

Seconding Mrs. Smith's motion, Gilligan explained his reversal of attitude. "Subsequent study of the magazine following the hearing accorded its editor, Maurice B. Robinson, and personal interviews with him . . . have convinced me my vote (to ban the publication) was wrong," Gilligan said, adding that he found the magazine to be one that "constantly suggests thought-provoking subjects."

Whitwell Opposed.

George Whitwell raised the only "no" to lifting the ban. He said he still was opposed to use of the magazine on the ground that "Robinson (the editor) was evasive and would not say he did, or did not, believe in radical propaganda."

Scholastic, already under fire on charge of communistic tendencies, was removed from the approved list last fall when attention of board members was called to an Armistice Day editorial carried in the magazine in 1933.

The editorial suggested that as an antiwar policy America might refuse to go to war until a national referendum had been taken, and also that that Nation's capital resources, as well as its manpower, be conscripted in the event of war.

The board voiced opposition to House Bill 161, which would prohibit outside activities on the part of officers, teachers and other employes of the public schools. Board members upheld Dr. Ballou in the opinion that professional activities of school employes is the business of the school administration.

Supply Bill Session.

The board decided on a special meeting for 10 a. m. Saturday to consider action before Senate committees on the District appropriation bill as recently passed by the House of Representatives. Items which the House eliminated from the school budget will receive special consideration at that time.

Testimonials and floral tributes were showered on Henry Gilligan, attorney and civic leader, yesterday as he made his farewell appearance as a member of the board.

His eight colleagues and Superintendent Frank W. Ballou joined in extending expressions of appreciation for his 11 years of service on the board. Most of them referred to the retiring member's "independence and courage."

These remarks were timely, because to make them the board recessed from a spirited debate in which Gilligan was making a one-man stand for a school teacher whose rating had been lowered. A few minutes after the testimonials were presented, the discussion was renewed and Gilligan went down to defeat, with all members voting against him.

President Praises.

"We know the city as a whole is aware of the work you have done in these 11 years," said Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, board president. "We on the board are also aware of the faithful service you have given, of your approach to school problems, which has always been that of a Christian gentleman; of your honesty and strong sense of justice."

From the Washington Teachers Union came a large floral piece, accompanied by this note, "With sincere appreciation and great respect for your civic leadership while a member of the Board of Education."

Gratz E. Dunkum, Gilligan's successor, will take the oath of office at an informal ceremony at 10:30 a. m. today in the board's office in the Franklin School.

N. A. Danowsky, a Pennsylvanian, was added to the school personnel yesterday when the board appointed him to the position of school statistician.

Student's Editorial Assails Sit-Down, Asks Intervention

A scathing denunciation of sit-down strikes will appear as an editorial in the Columbus University Skipper, student publication, today.

The editorial, by Elizabeth C. Fegan, a law student, is entitled "Sit-Down Strikes Are Illegal," and calls upon the Government to take steps to end them.

"Employment by individuals of sit-down strikes is not only unlawful, but contagious," stated Miss Fegan.

"Let us hope the Federal Government will not become contaminated by the germ and failing or declining to take jurisdiction, itself become a 'sit-downer.'"

Feminine 'Flying Salesman' Drops in on Nation's Capital

HELEN STANSBURY.

Helen Stansbury, Air Line Executive, Paid for Sweeping Women Off Their Feet; Once Studied at George Washington.

She flies 2,000 miles to talk 30 minutes. She sells the idea of air travel to women by pulling a ship out of the skies and bringing it right down to earth for prospective feminine customers. All with words, of course, but they serve well enough to make even the most land-loving ladies eager to soar to the clouds.

She is Helen Stansbury, dainty and dynamic "flying executive of the United Air Lines. Her official title is "director of the women's traffic division" for the company she represents. She is the only feminine holder of such a position.

Two months ago her only experience in the air was limited to the memory of a single flight "in an old orange crate over Catalina Island." She always had planned some time and somehow to fly again, but just never got around to it. There were othe rthings this Baltimore-born girl had to get done first. There was college to finisn (she was at one time a student at George Washington University). After that, she took a fling at social welfare work in New York's notorious "Hell's Kitchen," then she became assistant "contact man" for a newsreel company, and went from that to radio publicity, before she decided to settle down and write for a living.

Sold Story to Magazine.

She did write—and did right well as a result. The second story she finished was sold to Harper's and presently others were being turned out. "But I wanted more experience in a thrilling type of work before I turned over all my time to scribbling," she said yesterday. "And in search of something thrilling I decided to try to land a job with an airline; determined to do so, in fact."

Proof she not only had determination but also a flock of ideas to offer is borne out by the fact she got what she went after. She sold her services to the company by showing its executives how they could increase their passenger business, particularly among women. Her previous experience in welfare, radio and publicity work stood her in good stead. She was soon making regular trips the length and breadth of the land—from Boston to Vancouver, and from San Diego to Washington—"selling" the air idea to women.

"Sponge for Impressions."

"What I really am is a sponge for women's impressions," she said with a broad smile, then added in a more serious vein, "I try to find out what prospective customers think about air travel. I try to tell them how convenient, how comfortable, how time-saving it is. In other words, I make every effort to convince them it's a privilege and a pleasure."

Meanwhile, it's obvious this young lady with merry brown eyes wouldn't change places with any other woman in the world. "You've no idea how much fun it is to travel 10,000 miles a month, live in a suitcase, meet all types of women from sales-clerks to countesses, and tell them all what they're missing if they aren't inveterate air travelers."

Off to New York last night, Miss Stansbury expects to leave next week on a two months' lecture tour on the West Coast. While in Washington she was the guest of her mother, Mrs. Lillie Stansbury, who lives at the Hotel Martinique.

Suit Indicated to Open U. of M. to Colored

Baltimore, April 7 (AP).—Thurgood Marshall, counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, indicated today a series of lawsuits seeking to open the University of Maryland to colored students is under consideration by the organization.

Marshall said a plan advanced by President H. C. Byrd of the University of Maryland and subsequently enacted by the State Legislature, is discriminatory and not satisfactory.

Registry Plan For Engineers Given Support

Would Raise Them Above 'Level of Barbers,' Says Barnett.

Led by Joseph Barnett, chairman of their legislative committee, the Washington branch of the National Society of Professional Engineers, last night demanded that District engineers be raised above the professional "level of barbers."

This can be done, it was stated, only by the passage of a pending House bill which would force all local engineers to be registered by a duly authorized board.

In rallying his brother engineers to the support of the bill, Barnett, drawing examples from medicine, dentistry and law, declared "our profession, too, must be disciplined. Legislation providing such "discipline" is in effect, it was shown, in 35 States.

The bill, referred by the House District Committee to the Board of Commissioners, defines a qualified engineer as a person who has been graduated from an approved school, who has had four years of active practice in engineering work, and who succeeds in passing a written examination.

The bill, if passed, it was claimed, would safeguard life and property in the District.

A petition in support of the bill is now gathering the names of District engineers. It soon will be presented to the Commissioners, for, said Barnett, "without their help the bill cannot succeed."

At the meeting also, provisions were made for appointing members of the following committees: Mail and communications, membership, examination, legislation, public relations, professional relations, arrangements and program, re-employment, records, fees and by-laws.

The meeting was held in the Raleigh Hotel.

Police Raid Closes Apartment House Gambling Center

Led by Lieut. Clarence Tally, police last night raided a fashionable gambling establishment on the sixth and seventh floors of an apartment house in the 1700 block of Seventeenth street northwest, confiscated $900 in nickels and dimes, and a quantity of alleged gaming material.

Eugene D. Burdine, alleged operator of the place, was arrested and charged with conspiracy to violate the gambling laws. Later he was released on $2,000 bond. Two women were questioned and released.

Police said the establishment consisted of four apartments, two on the sixth and two on the seventh floor. These were adjacent on each floor, and connected by secret doors.

Tally and his men forced the doors to enter each place. In addition to the money, which they said they believed was the daily "take" of numbers runners, police got four pistols.

Traffic Group Lays Plans to Cut Accidents

City-Wide Attack Mapped on Highway Recklessness.

Police to Enforce Laws Rigidly in Drive to End Fatalities.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Plans for closer co-ordination of all District traffic-control activities were discussed yesterday at a meeting of administration heads in the office of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

A city-wide attack on highway lawlessness—with every traffic agency in the city pledged to relentless enforcement of regulations—was the major topic of discussion, it was learned.

Inspector William E. Holmes, newly appointed police traffic supervisor and a member of the coordinating committee, announced plans for a vigorous attack on motorists who refuse to give proper hand singnals and turn from wrong lanes of traffic.

The committee agreed that this type of violation was an important factor in the city's growing accident record. Inspector Holmes also told the committee he had ordered more rigid enforcement methods by policemen assigned to the various precincts.

Members of Committee.

In addition to Van Duzer and Inspector Holmes, the co-ordinating group consists of J. L. Martin, Public Utilities Commission; Capt. P. J. Carroll, United States Park Police; Edward Thomas, assistant corporation counsel, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

The three "E's" of traffic control—enforcement, education and engineering—will be applied by the committee to bring about improved highway conditions in Washington, it was reported.

The group meets once a month to discuss traffic problems and make plans of action.

On Capitol Hill yesterday, the Senate adopted an amendment to the District safety responsibility act providing for the suspension of operators' permits for failure to pay any judgment based on a traffic accident, regardless of amount.

Covers Any Damage.

The measure, recommended by the Commissioners, passed the Senate by unanimous consent and now goes to the House. It strikes out a phrase "in excess of $100" with relation to the judgments.

And in Traffic Court yesterday, Isadore H. Minovitz, local attorney, was arraigned before Judge Walter J. Casey on 16 separate traffic counts. It was alleged the charges resulted from various parking offenses since the first of the year.

"I wasn't notified of the charges," was Minovitz's statement to Judge Casey.

After testimony by ten policemen, who said they ticketed his car on numerous occasions, Minovitz was fined a total of $32—$2 on each count.

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated James S. Higdon, 48, street car motorman, in the death of Mrs. Mary M. Shloss, 56, the city's thirty-seventh traffic victim.

Death Held Accidental.

Mrs. Shloss was struck by a street car at Eighteenth street and Columbia road northwest, Saturday. She attempted to cross the street in the middle of the block, the jury was told. Higdon said he failed to see the woman in time to avoid the accident. The jury held her death to be accidental.

Meanwhile, it was announced yesterday that a comprehensive program of research into the causes of highway accidents is under way by the Bureau of Public Roads.

Three phases of the highway safety problems are being given particular attention, it was reported. These include a detailed study of the lack of uniformity of State motor vehicle laws, study of the characteristics and habits of drivers and identification of dangerous drivers and improvement of the basic data needed for the study of accident causes and prevention.

$3,000 Is Donated to Hospitals Before Drive for Funds Begins

Drayton Reports Grants Toward Meeting Deficits as Crusade for Health Is Mapped at Mayflower Luncheon.

Although the emergency appeal does not begin officially until April 15, more than $3,000 already has been contributed toward meeting the deficits of nine Washington hospitals, Chairman Charles D. Drayton reported yesterday.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting at the Hotel Mayflower, the president of Children's Hospital stressed the importance of "this effort to save the private hospitals from gradual decline and possible ultimate extinction."

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, indorsed the drive for funds, stressing the indispensable role of hospitals in combating the city's high disease and death rates.

The appeal for public aid is a result of acute financial shortages due to the abnormal load placed on the hospitals during the last two years.

In January and February of this year, 3,560 days of hospital care were certified by the Central Admitting Bureau for which the institutions have not been paid by the Community Chest.

During the same period, 10,000 visits to prenatal, syphilis and other clinics were certified but not paid for. The Community Chest was able to reimburse the nine hospitals for 7,860 in-patient days and 22,000 clinic visits during the two months.

Addressing more than 200 civic leaders, Drayton emphasized particularly that the Community Chest is blameless for the deficits and that the coming drive is not intended to compete with it.

"We are loyal to the Community Chest and entirely in sympathy with its aims and purposes," he said. "We do not want a dollar that would otherwise go to the Chest. We want to add to, and not detract from, the prestige of that splendid organization.

"We shall endeavor to make this appeal a crusade to emphasize the importance of the Chest to the people of Washington and the imperative need for it to be permitted to continue the work it has done and is doing."

Largest contributions to date, he asserted, include a $1,000 donation by Mrs. F. W. Van Slyke; $1,000 realized from the recent style show sponsored by the Connecticut Avenue Business Men's Association; an anonymous $500 and $100 by the Twentieth Century Club.

"We aim to make this not merely an appeal which will enable these hospitals to limp along until the end of 1937 in their struggle to provide care for the underprivileged, if not indigent, sick and diseased," Drayton said.

"We want to go out militantly in a crusade for health. A crusade that will make it unnecessary to conduct any such appeal as this again."

The appeal will come to a close May 1, which is National Child Health Day. Headquarters have been provided gratis by the Hotel Mayflower.

Members of the hospital presidents' committee, of which Drayton is chairman, are:

Capt. Chester Wells, Columbia; Maj. Gist Blair, Emergency; the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat; Clarence A. Aspinwall, Garfield; the Rev. Arthur J. O'Leary, Georgetown; Cloyd Heck Marvin, George Washington; Col. Joseph F. Randall, Homeopathic, and Sister Margaret, Providence.

Bishop Freeman pronounced the invocation at yesterday's luncheon and Father O'Leary gave the benediction.

Dinner Canceled.

The dinner in honor of Senators Alben W. Barkley and M. M. Logan, which was to have been given tonight at the Shoreham, has been canceled by the Kentucky Democratic Club of Washington on account of the death in Memphis, Tenn., of Henry Thomas Ladd, father of Fonnie Black Ladd, who was chairman of the dinner committee. Plans are being made for giving the event in late spring.

9 Tax Bills Are Optional, Collins Says

Passage of All Never Intended Unless D. C. Needs Revenue.

Committee to Choose; Kennedy Group to Meet Today.

By James D. Secrest.

Chairman Collins of the House sub-committee on District appropriations yesterday explained that he never intended that all nine of the local tax bills he proposed be enacted into law unless the District government needs the revenue.

His statement was made on the eve of an organization meeting of the special sub-committee of the House District Committee. This sub-committee, directed by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), Maryland, will meet at 10:30 a. m. today to draft plans for hearings to begin next week.

Collins, who offered to appear before the Kennedy sub-committee to explain the nine tax bills, one of which he has not yet introduced, said he agreed with the legislative group there is no necessity at this time for raising more revenue than needed to meet the anticipated $6,000,000 deficit in the 1938 supply bill.

Committee to Select.

"I merely wanted to offer all the bills," he said, "so that the committee could select the best and enough to raise all the money that will be needed next year."

The eight bills already introduced propose levies on incomes, inheritances, motor vehicles by weight, an increase of 2 cents in the gasoline tax and privilege taxes on corporations, motion-picture theaters and parking lots.

He has not completed the ninth tax bill, which revises upward the assessments on public utilities. He said he will offer it, however, before the Kennedy sub-committee begins hearings.

Collins has estimated that the nine tax bills would produce additional revenue of more than $12,000,000.

Kennedy to Remain.

Representative Kennedy said he will retain the chairmanship of the tax sub-committee. He had considered resigning in favor of Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, but he has now arranged his other work in order to have time to conduct the District investigation.

Today the sub-committee will decide not only upon a course of hearings, but will try to determine what steps will be taken to obtain about $10,000 to employ special counsel. Kennedy intends to recommend William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, for the job.

The sub-committee will decide whether to ask that the money be added to the District supply bill or to introduce a special resolution to obtain it from the contingent funds of the House.

Tax bills will be the first consideration of the sub-committee once hearings are started, Kennedy said. After that the problem of District government reorganization will be tackled.

Kennedy said the Jacobs report will be studied in connection with the inquiry despite the contentions of members of the sub-committee on District appropriations that it is dead.

Pall Mall Room Now Featuring District Singer

Sally Evans Scoring Hit at Raleigh; Banfields Great Act.

By Chanticleer.

The local girl that is making good at a Washington night spot is Sally Evans. Sally spent most of her life in the Nation's Capital, went to the Cathedral School and made her debut here. Now, the featured singer at the Raleigh's Pall Mall room, she is winning all the patrons over to her side with her pleasant and cultured voice. If you have friends who are visiting Washington be sure and take them to the popular club on Pennsylvania avenue for a night of real entertainment.

Since this is visitor's week in the Nation's Capital, we suggest to those who would like something different to eat and different in the way of entertainment to try the Troika on Connecticut avenue. There's a breath-taking Russian show at 8:30 and at 12 midnight. Music by Sascha Bartnovsky and his orchestra. The Troika will be pleased to greet all their friends and can promise their guests that an evening spent at their tables will be a night well enjoyed.

The Lotus continues to pack them in with that stellar show, "Practice Makes Perfect," which was an original Joe Cook enterprise. You really must see the Banfields in this novelty act and you will agree with everyone that it is the best bit of sparkling etnertainment that Washington ever has seen. On the same bill with the Banfields are Diane and Duval, featuring an Indian adagio and veil of the mist dance; Emile Paard in songs and dances that are different; and the Paul Florenz DeLovables who make up the dancing line with costumes that are very appropriate for the Springtime Revue. Bill Strickland, the Lotus's orchestral maestro, is featuring pretty Evelyn Knight and her newest song hits.

The Tidal Basin is the show-off place of Washington this week with its apron of cherry blossoms but it was the Madrillon Restaurant that created a foot-path between their domicile and the blossoms. After a trek around the Basin, the blossom-fans seem to beat a well-made path to the doors of the Madrillon. There's a reason, too. A brisk walk about the trees gives one a healthy appetite that can only be appeased at the Madrilon where they find food that is tempting and delicious. Johnny Shaw and his lads are making the out-of-towners feel right at home at this club, what with the playing of State songs and what not.

Arthur Warren has nothing on Jack Benny and vice-versa when it comes to arranging difficult classical numbers for dance music—despite the fact that it requires a lot of work. When Jack announced over the ether waves that he would treat his orchestra and fans with a rendition of Schubert's "The Bee" on a future program . . . what did Arthur do? What did he do? He actually played it for the amuzement of his friends, and they enjoyed it. That's Aruthur for you. Anything to please his friends. The people who frequent the Metronome room at the Wardman Park Hotel should know that Bernie Allen is responsible for the swell arrangements that keep the dance floor crowded or don't you like crowded dance floors? Incidentally, the tea dance at the Metronome is proving quite an attraction during the spring holidays—it's almost like the good old college days.

Tarrant and Dacita, gorgeous dance team bow to the Shoreham audiences at tonight's dinner dance. Washington's smart audiences have shown a distinct delight for the type of dancing as displayed by this team and it won't surprise us one bit if Tarrant and Dacita prove to be just a notch better in this type of dancing.

Have you heard of "One-to-Two?" It takes a bit of explaining. It's the after-midnight session in the Shoreham cocktail lounge, and everybody goes to town. And everybody (almost) goes to the One-to-Two Club.

A prince and a princess, a movie star, two of the country's most prominent bankers, an official of the United Mine Workers and three of Washington's most popular debs were among those in the Carelton's El Patio enjoying Sande Williams music and entertainment the other night. At some one's request, Jack Tarr, who let out the secret of his ability to clog when he put on a special skit St. Patrick's night, did a fancy bit of clogging—much to the delight of the audience. Incidentally, Sande admitted his secret ambition the other night—he wants to learn to fly—happy landings, Sande.

For Your Entertainment

Mule's Sit-Down Solved by Army 'Strike Breaker'

New York, April 7 (AP).—Army officials at Fort Totten tonight figured out a solution for the sit-down strike being staged by Jack, their 24-year-old Missouri mule.

Jack, who's been working a full eight-hour day in the Army ever since he was 2 years old and has done service in France and Mexico, suddenly decided to work only the first half of every day.

So, Sergt. Maj. Clay Doster announced tonight, the officials worked out a compromise solution—the only compromise possible with a mule:

Hereafter, Jack will have to work only half a day.

Meanwhile, a strikebreaking mule was imported from the New Rochelle Army Post.

Women Back Playgrounds' Original Fund

A motion to the effect that the figures approved by the Budget Bureau for the Playground Department be restored in the District appropriations bill was passed last night by the Women's City Club.

The amount requested for restoration was $97,565. This sum represents the difference between the 1938 budget estimate of $209,580 and the $112,015 passed by the House.

It was further moved that the amounts transferred to the Community Center Department from the Playground Department, totaling $97,565, be restored to the Department of Playgrounds.

The members of the club, who have long been familiar with the problem of recreation in Washington, stated they felt a better program would be possible under the present setup of the Playground Department than by a sudden change of the program to another agency by means of the rider in the appropriations bill.

A copy of the resolution, which was signed by Mrs. Grace Dexter Bryan, chairman of the civics committee of the club, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the organization, was sent to Senator Elmer Thomas, Oklahoma, chairman of the sub-committee for the District of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

A resolution indorsing a District minimum wage law for men as well as women and children was adopted by the club.

A copy of the resolution was sent to President Roosevelt, another to the Commissioners, and others to House and Senate District Committees.

2 Morro Castle Officers Cleared

New York, April 7 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today unanimously reversed a lower court verdict that convicted Capt. William F. Warms and Chief Engineer Eben Abbott of criminal negligence in the liner Morro Castle disaster, costing 134 lives.

The circuit court ruled the evidence was insufficient, completely exonerated Warms of charges of mismanagement, and ruled that instructions to the jury on some charges were incomplete.

The reversals sets aside prison sentences of two and four years imposed on Warms and Abbott. Retrials in cases of reversals were not customary.

Fines of $5,000 and $10,000 imposed at the original trial on Henry E. Cabaud, vice president of the New York and Cuba Mail Stemship Co., Morro Castle owners, and on the company, respectively, never were appealed.

Princeton Awards Deadline April 25

Applications for Princeton University War Memorial Prize scholarships must be sent to the director of admissions at the university before April 25, it was announced yesterday by the committee.

Two awards will be made from the Potomac district, covering Washington, Maryland and Virginia. Any resident of this area—regardless of the location of the school which he attends—is eligible. Two alternates will also be chosen. The scholarships are based on leadership, character, scholarship and activities. Members of the selection committee include Lawrence M. Proctor, J. Edgar Murdock, Rudolph Kauffmann 2d, Lee D. Butler and F. Moran McConihe.

Howard Group Honors Virgin Islands Judge

A testimonial dinner in honor of Judge William H. Hastie, of the District Court for the Virgin Islands, was given last night by the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity at Howard University. Dr. Robert C. Weaver, of the Interior Department, was toastmaster. Felicitations were extended the newly appointed judge by Dr. Charles L. Drew.

The dinner committee consisted of Tecumseh Bradshaw, W. Montague Cobb, West A. Hamilton, Campbell C. Johnson, Louia W. Jones, Roscoe McKinney, James Nabrit, James Ramsey, Philip Snowden, Walter Washington, F. S. Weaver, J. Arthur Weiseger, George Whitted, E. Naylor Fitzhugh and Edward Beaubian, chairman.

New Site Asked For Annex of Pan American

Ickes Proposes Building Be Located on Lot at 18th and C.

The Pan American Annex, a dream building which is receiving a merciless buffeting because Secretary Ickes wants to protect the monumental view of his new Interior Department headquarters, is still very much unlocated.

Chairman Fritz Lanham and his House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds yesterday lent sympathetic ears to Ickes, Pan American Union Director General Leo S. Rowe, and a host of others but nothing was decided.

The hearing was on a bill, introduced by Lanham at the behest of Ickes, providing that the orphan-like annex be located flush in the middle of Eighteenth street at Constitution avenue. This would mean the closing of the street between C and the avenue.

But when Ickes appeared yesterday it was not to argue for passage of the measure, re-introduced this year after being pigeonholed at the last session, but to propose a new bill.

On Corner Lot.

This one would put the annex at Eighteenth and C streets, on the northwest corner of the lot now occupied by the union's main building, and allow Eighteenth street to be kept open. The Pan American Union would be reimbursed a sum not in excess of $45,000 for the expense it went to in constructing a tunnel connecting the main building with the Constitution avenue triangle on which it planned to erect the annex until Ickes entered objections last year.

The Interior Secretary argues that use of the triangle, which lies between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, would block the southern exposure of the new Interior Department Building.

Without taking sides in the controversy, Commissioner Hazen testified that enactment of the pending bill to close Eighteenth street would cost the District more than $70,000 for relocation of sewer mains and street lighting alone.

Traffic Hazard.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said that sticking a building in the center of Eighteenth street would create an additional traffic hazard. Melvin Sharpe, representing the Potomac Electric Power Co., said the change would cost his firm about $5,000. The cost of altering street car trackage also was brought out.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission is on record against the annex at the end of Eighteenth street. Its first choice is the triangle, its second the Eighteenth and C street corner now recommended by Ickes.

The Fine Arts Commission is set on the annex going to the triangle. It has approved the redesigning of the building to bring it into closer harmony with neighboring buildings along Constitution avenue and with the new Interior Department headquarters.

Dr. Rowe listened intently yesterday to Ickes' attack on the plans which have been almost eight years in the making, but refrained from committing himself in any way pending the meeting of his board of directors next month.

Accordingly, Chairman Lanham announced that his committee would take no action until it hears from the Union.

Action Is Sought On Brownlow Plan

Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson yesterday denied reports Administration leaders will recommend abandonment for the session of the President's sweeping reorganization proposals.

"There is no accuracy in statements that there is any plan to hold up action," said Robinson. "There are many ramifictaions, and what we will do is only a matter for conjecture, but I think there will be some action."

Intermittent hearings have been held by the Joint Congressional Committee on Government Reorganization on recommendations of the Brownlow committee transmitted to Congress by the President.

Recent closed hearings have been held on the alternative recommendations of the Brookings Institute.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, who was given only a minority voice on the joint reorganization committee, said yesterday he favored abandonment of the Brownlow report indorsed by the President.

Saving of Timber Drive Objective

By the Associated Press.

Lumber men and State foresters began to lay the foundation yesterday for a national timber conservation policy.

Seeking to correlate Federal and State activities, 200 delegates attended a forest conservation conference sponsored by the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association. They heard discussions of fire and disease menaces and NRA code practices, which some delegates said never became fully operative.

F. A. Silcox, chief of the Agriculture Department forest service, and Dean Henry S. Graves, of the Yale Forestry School, told the conference some degree of Federal regulation might be necessary to attain the greatest degree of conservation.

British Cabinet Urged To Bend Down, Sister

London, April 7 (AP).—The minister of education suggested today that Britain's portly cabineteers bow down and try to touch their toes to demonstrate the need of physical training in England.

He was Oliver Stanley, who seconded the government's physical training for youth bill. Commons cheered. The cabinet did not respond.

Prince Georges Expects Racing To Aid Coffers

$50,000 to $75,000 Income From 'Bookies' May Cut Taxes by 10%.

Prince Georges officials yesterday were looking forward to an increase in the county income of from $50,000 to $75,000 a year as a result of the legalization of race-horse bookmaking, but for Washington law-enforcement officials the new "bookie" law promised only a headache.

Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Upper Marlboro, president of the State Senate, said it was hoped that the legalization of bookmaking would raise the county's revenue sufficiently to permit a 10 per cent decrease in taxes.

He added that for every $25,000 license issued the tax rate could be cut 4 per cent.

In addition to raising revenue, Senator Saccer said, the $25,000 county license fee will limit the number of bookies, thus enabling the county to maintain better police supervision of the establishments.

Meantime, members of the district attorneys' office were faced with the problem of preventing Washington from being overrun with agents for bookmakers operating just across the District line.

It was pointed out that the effect of the legalization of race horse gambling in Maryland and, particularly in Prince Georges County, might possibly result in nullifying the District's antigambling regulations.

Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, declared steps should be taken to prevent bookmakers in nearby Maryland from doing a lively business in Washington. He declared there was danger that the legalization of bookmaking so close to the District would develop into a "racket," resulting in open violation of the local gambling laws.

He suggested legislation designed to prevent communication between Maryland bookmakers and Washington gamblers might be enacted by Congress, but added that he would not sponsor it.

While some District officials expressed the belief legalized bookmaking in Prince Georges County would result in a heavy telephone business between Washington race horse fans and Maryland bookies, Roger Robb, of the United States district attorney's office, scoffed at the idea.

He said that the bookmakers would not accept bets over the phone unless assured of payment in case the bettor lost.

Robb added that runners for Maryland bookies who might solicit bets in Washington would be guilty of violating the District law and would be subject to punishment.

In Prince Georges County informed sources scouted reports that negotiations already had been begun by several big-time gamblers to secure licenses. J. Wilson Ryon, of Hyattsville, who has represented Jimmy LaFontaine in a number of court cases, said last night he had not been approached by the proprietor of the famous Bladensburg road casino in regard to obtaining a license from the county board of commissioners.

As a matter of fact, "Jimmy" is at present vacationing in the South.

J. G. Duke Appeal Heard in Richmond

Richmond, Va., April 7 (AP).—The United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals heard arguments today on the appeal of Jesse G. Duke, Washington attorney, from a District Court conviction at Alexandria of attempting to influence the action of a Federal grand jury.

Duke, now free on bond, was sentenced to four months at Camp Lee in information proceedings charging him with handing a grand juror a sealed communication while the grand jury was considering a charge against him of harboring former Representative J. H. Hoeppel, of California, while the latter was a Federal fugitive.

Soviet Shifts Envoy.

Moscow, April 7 (AP).—The Russian government today announced the appointment of Jacob Zakharovitch Surits as ambassador to France. He has been ambassador to Berlin since October, 1934, and he succeeds in the Paris post Vladimir P. Potemkin, recently named first assistant commissar for foreign affairs.

Smith Protests Curtailing Two Harvard Aides

U. S. Labor Relations Unit Member Complains in Walsh, Sweezy Case.

Edwin S. Smith, member of the Labor Relations Board, protested to President James Conant, of Harvard University, yesterday against "curtailment" of the services of the two Harvard economics teachers.

In making public his letter to Conant, Smith emphasized his protest was personal and not made as a Labor Board member.

The letter said:

"I find the account in the Boston Traveler of the curtailment of the teaching appointments of Drs. Walsh and Sweezy most disturbing.

"I cannot believe there is any connection between this action and a too frank support of these men of progressive economic thought and policy.

"In any event, the university appears to have blundered.

"The individuals and the institutions which are committed to the protection of academic freedom should be most scrupulous to avoid construction of innocent acts.

"Even Harvard cannot expect to be exempt from the inevitable suspicion that arises when outspoken teachers of economics find their academic careers in danger."

Smith said J. Raymond Walsh, one of the teachers, recently had said he was "ashamed to his feet" of the opposition to the child labor amendment expressed by A. Lawrence Lowell, Harvard's president emeritus.

Sara Roosevelt, 6, Recovering Here From Appendicitis

Sara Roosevelt, 6-year-old granddaughter of President Roosevelt, was recovering in Emergency Hospital last night from an operation for acute appendicitis.

According to advices received at the White House, the girl awoke yesterday morning wondering what had happened to her. The operation was performed during the night and Sara, hospital attaches reported, spent a comfortable day.

Sara, the daughter of James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son, was rushed to the hospital after her father, advised of her illness during a Presidential press conference, called several physicians into consultation.

The operation was performed by Dr. James A. Lyons.

Parran Finds U. S. Awake to Syphilis Peril

Tells Health Officers Most States Give Funds for Control.

Surgeon General Thomas Parran, Federal guardian of the Nation's health, yesterday summed up what has been accomplished during the year and what remains to be done.

Addressing the thirty-fifth annual conference of State and Territorial Health Officers, he pointed to the following milestones:

All 48 States, the District of Columbia, Alaska and Hawaii are sharing in the public health benefits of the social security act.

Numerous improvements in quarantine procedure.

Public awakening to the dangers of syphilis, with all but 11 of the States now expending a part of their social security funds for venereal disease control and the medical profession joining in the campaign.

Progress by the States, aided by social security funds, in studying nutritional problems, and beginning investigations of disease and problems of sanitation.

But the gigantic task of reducing the toll of preventable deaths calls for many more measures, he asserted.

"One of the greatest difficulties has been to secure and train promptly an adequate staff of public health personnel," he said. "The whole success of our joint efforts in future years will depend upon our ability to attract able men and women for public health service."

Yellow Fever Menace.

He pointed out that increasing aerial travel between North and South America has brought the yellow fever menace to the fore. Meeting the challenge, he announced appointment of a special committee which will have three major objectives:

1. Immediate measures for protection of cities serving as terminals for air traffic with South America.

2. Measures necessary to reduce the number of places in which Aedes aegypti, the mosquito that carries the yellow fever germ, breeds.

3. Establishment of an emergency organization to map out a Federal-State program in case the fever should pass quarantine barriers and be introduced into this country.

In the crusade against syphilis, he urged the States to appoint full-time venereal disease control officers, distribute free anti-syphilitic drugs, standardize and improve laboratory services, develop epidemiological services, improve treatment facilities and report cases efficiently.

"In years past," he said, "the public has ignored and in some instances the profession has opposed actual syphilis control by health departments. Now the public and the profession are united in demanding action. This demand finds us, the Federal, State and local health agencies, unequipped, unprepared to give the necessary service."

Laboratories Inadequate.

The Nation's laboratory services, both public and private, need a "thorough overhauling," he declared.

A recent test of certain public and private laboratories shows that one in ten of them perform a test so insensitive that one-half of the cases of syphilis are missed. Other laboratories are making false positive reports, and thereby labeling healthy persons as syphilitic."

He criticized doctors who rarely appear at clinics of which they are the head and hospitals which refuse to accept syphilis and gonorrhea cases for treatment, "although their free beds are filled both with acute complications under a more euphonious diagnosis and with late results of heart and nervous system complications."

Dr. Parran also cited the serious public health aspects of the transient problem, aggravated by the increasing popularity of trailers.

Greater emphasis on nutrition was urged by Dr. W. H. Sebrell, who is in charge of the studies which the Public Health Service is conducting at the National Institute of Health.

Health Education Urged.

"Adequate and proper nutrition is as essential a basis of public health and welfare as is a sanitary environment and protection from infectious diseases," he asserted.

He recommended placement of a trained nutritionist on the staff of every State board of health.

Dr. Estella Ford Warner, of the Public Health Service, spoke on the importance of public health education. State officers, she said, should address themselves particularly to professional groups, the general public and the schools.

Investigations by the Federal service have shown that uniformity is lacking in the States' public health education programs, that few possess systematic plans for disseminating information and that the accuracy of a large percentage of the educational matter is questionable.

She urged the States to take a greater interest in public school curricula, seeing to it that health subjects are well chosen and properly covered.

The conference will continue today at the Public Health Service building.

College President Dies.

Houghton, N. Y., April 7 (AP).—Dr. James Seymour Luckey, for 29 years president of Houghton College, died today. He was 69.

Martyrdom Sought by Davis To End Vengeance, Letter Shows

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press

New York, April 7.—Jefferson Davis, white-haired President of the fallen Confederate States of America, prayed that the spirit of vengeance sweeping the land after the Civil War might be pacified by making him solely responsible for the "sins" of his people.

This was revealed today when John C. Pemberton, a New York lawyer, made public another hitherto unpublished letter written by Davis to his friend, James Lyons, who, as a lawyer, prepared to defend him against a Federal Government indictment on a charge of treason.

Pemberton, a great-grandson of Lyons, said it was found this week among the personal effects of an aunt who died recently at Richmond, Va., along with the letter, published yesterday, in which Davis explained why Sherman was able so easily to make his famous march to the sea.

With his dream of a Southland free to rule itself turned into a nightmare and his people suffering from the effects that only war can bring, Davis, from his seashore retreat at Beauvoir, Miss., wrote:

"I had at one time hoped that the spirit of vengeance might be allayed by making me a scapegoat for the South. That hope has not been realized.

Ready for Sacrifice.

"Be assured," he wrote Lyons, "there is no sacrifice I could make for the South which would not be willingly offered."

"There are few who, like yourself, feel that they are humiliated by the discrimination against me.

"More generally I believe they feel that it is a tribute to constancy in the cause which they did not, in the mind of the North so specially represent, so feeling, they would not have it otherwise than as it is, 'save in these lands.'"

Until he died, Davis fought that he might have his citizenship papers restored—that he once more might be called an American and have lifted the charge that he was a traitor.

"Now sir if I were to ask to have my disabilities removed, it would not be as you say a confession of wrong on my part, but it would be to that extent an admission of right to impose the disability which I asked them to remove," he explained to Lyons.

"It requires two-thirds of Congress to remove the disability, the minority would exult over the application as proof of repentance on my part, and refuse to grant it.

"Those who excluded me from the benefits of a pension law to which I was entitled as an officer wounded in battle at Beuna Vista, would hardly hesitate to deny me political privileges which they would regard as the precursor of my return to the United States Senate, which I will say to you, I have not the best (least) disposition to go."

To charges that he had said he proposed to destroy the Union, Davis wrote:

"I did state to the Senate generally that I could not, as an honorable man, represent a State in the Senate, with a purpose to destroy the Union, and did further say, if any man would call me a disunionist, I would answer him in monosyllables."

No one, Davis said, ever "made the experiment."

clubs and elsewhere, the festival committee reported.

Symbolic gyrations by the Evelyn Davis dancers will occupy the sunrise program continuing from 6 to 7 a. m. The headline attraction—crowning of Queen Sakiko and an elaborate fireworks display—will be introduced at 7:45 p. m. by a Marine Band concert.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen is scheduled to place the diadem upon the brow of 10-year-old Queen Sakiko, following which she will be taken for a regal boat ride over the Tidal Basin. Visually, her craft will be drawn by a swan but actually it has a motor.

For the pleasure of their queen, and thousands of spectators whose attendance is expected, the Evelyn Davis Dancers will dance and then will come the pyrotechnics.

"Dance of Greeting."

The Davis dancers will give a "Dance of Greeting" at the sunrise ceremony. The entire group will participate. The other dances to be given by the group will include "Court Dance," in which ten will take part, and "The Legend of the Cherry Blossoms" in which there are four principal characters.

THE BICARBONATE OF SODA HABIT

If You Have Stomach Trouble Due to Excess Acid Soda May Make It Worse

Bicarbonate of Soda is a wolf in sheep's clothing. You think it's helping you—and it does for the moment. But all the while it is making matters worse.

Bicarbonate neutralizes the excess acid that causes heartburn, sassy stomach, belching, sourness, bloating, acid indigestion THEN it starts neutralizing the NORMAL acid content of the stomach. This normal acid content is essential for good digestion. If it's knocked out of balance—made alkaline—your stomach is knocked out, too.

So lay off Bicarbonate. There's a better, safer way to stomach relief—Cal-Trate Tablets. They neutralize ONLY the EXCESS acid that causes the trouble. Then they harmlessly pass out of the system. Be sure you ask for and get Cal-Trate Tablets—they contain no Bicarbonate of Soda and are not a laxative. Sold and recommended by Peoples, and all good druggists. (Adv.)

Sir Launcelot was iron-plated ... inside and out

He was a non-stop performer, at the table as well as in battle... Modern man eats more sensibly and, if he drinks, chooses a light whiskey

WHEN he wasn't riding down outlaws or rescuing captive maidens, the great Launcelot was doing his knightly duty at the Round Table with the boys. Huge platters of game, great goblets of liquor ... these were trifles to Arthur's No. 1 Knight. And if he felt a bit foggy the next day, he could declare a holiday for himself.

It's different with modern man. He wears no armor plate, inside or out. He's a sensible eater and, if he drinks, drinks lightly, for he knows that his busy, competitive life demands moderation.

IRISH AMERICAN is a fine, exceptionally light whiskey, especially developed for modern tastes and modern living. Combining a rich, robust pot-still whiskey with a specially distilled straight American whiskey, IRISH AMERICAN has a distinctive and satisfying flavor. And it is so light and mild that it's perfect as a straight drink, as well as in cocktails and highballs. Available at most places that sell good liquors . . . and you will be surprised at IRISH AMERICAN'S moderate price. Ask for it by name.

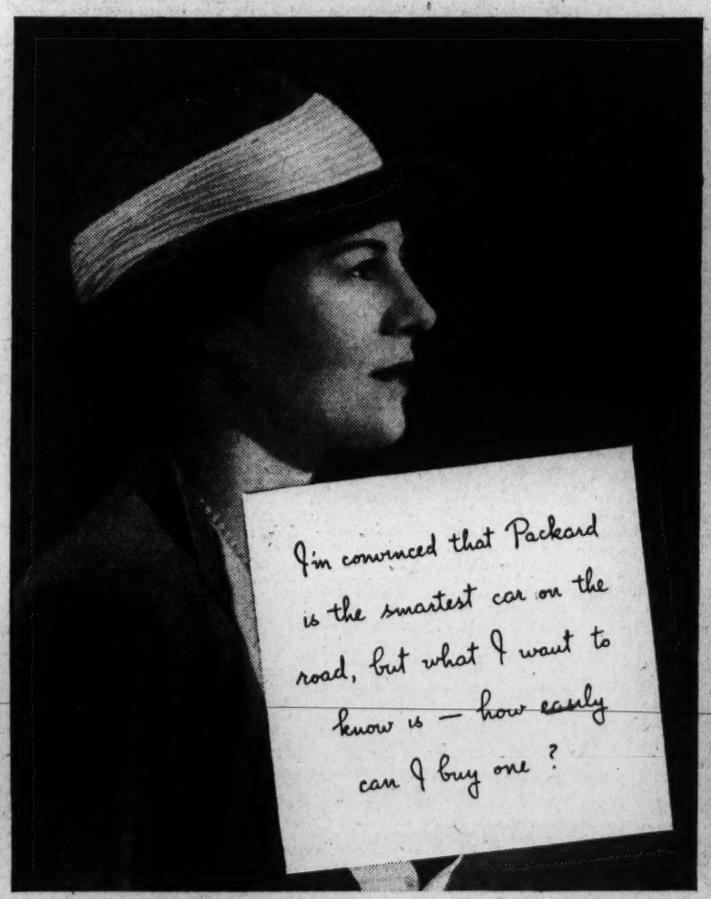
"I WANT TO KNOW ALL ABOUT THE PACKARD SIX"



THE COUPON AT THE RIGHT will bring you specific figures showing how easy the Packard Six is to purchase.

But—that's only half the story. We'd like to have the chance to answer all your questions about the Packard Six. Frankly, we believe it's the perfect personal car for women. And we've planned Ladies' Week to give you a special opportunity to see what a thrill it is to own and drive a Packard.

You'll be glad to know, too, that this new Packard gives you all the power and response of a 100-horsepower motor—yet has the thriftiness with gasoline for which six-cylinder motors are famous. Ask us to show you some actual figures on the car's low gasoline consumption.

And because the Packard Six is so simple in design, it can be serviced very cheaply. This simplicity of design is important, for on the ordinary repair bill, perhaps 70% of the charge is for labor.

In fact, most service operations can be performed more quickly, with less labor hours, on a Packard Six than on the average car costing less—even cars celebrated for their low service costs.

These terms sound rather masculine, we know, but they're important to every motorist's pocketbook. So—take your first step toward Packard Six ownership, without obligation. Simply fill out and mail the coupon—then join us during Ladies' Week, April 5th to 17th.

HERE'S AN EASY WAY TO GET THE FIGURES FOR YOUR OWN CASE!

Holdovers Will Dominate New Theater Bills

Many Hit Films Are Being Continued in Midcity Picture Houses.

"The Good Earth," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's imposing picturization of the noval by Pearl S. Buck, with Paul Muni and Luise Rainer in the costellar roles, will be continued for a second week as a reserved seat "road show" attraction at the National. This is one of the supreme achievemnts of the cinema in the filmization of serious and, at times somber, drama. The supporting cast is led by Walter Connolly, Charles Grapewin, Tilly Losch and Harold Huber, with en ensemble of thousands to lend magnitude and authenticity to the pictures. Performances are given daily at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m.

With next week's regular booking still in abeyance, the Belasco Theater on Sunday night will present Cecilia Adler, distinguished Jewish actress, in a single performance of "The Simple Woman." Miss Adler has recently enjoyed a run of 16 weeks in this play in New York. She will be supported by a strong cast, identical with that which appeared in Manhattan.

Bette Davis, winner of the academy award for the best screen acting of 1935, will be the pictured star at the Earle Theater for the week beginning Friday in "Marked Woman." The story concerns the hostess of a night club operated by a gang of racketeers headed by that sinister stage and screen villain, Eduardo Ciannelli, remembered for his work with the Lunts in "Reunion in Vienna" and in "Winterset." Others in the cast include Jane Bryan, Humphrey Bogart, Isabel Jewell, Rosalind Marquis, Lola Lane and Mayo Methot. On the stage, the bill will be headlined by Willie and Eugene Howard, stars of vaudeville, musical comedy and revue, with Bert Granoff, Carolyn Henry and Dean Herrick held over for a second week. The Three Wiles and the Five Jansleys complete the bill.

Margaret Lindsay and Jeffrie Dean appear in the principal roles of "Song of the City," to be shown as chief screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Capitol Theater. This is a story of San Francisco's "Littlle Italy," and is said to be rich in drama. Nat Pendleton, J. Carroll Naish and Charles Judels are other important members of the cast. The stage entertainment will be supplied by Cab Calloway and his Darktown Revue, featuring the orchestra that blares forth such hot Harlem rhythms. All of Calloway's popular hits will be embraced in his program, augmented by a considerable list of sepia specialists of the first rank. Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's overture will round out the program.

Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy will continue on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater for a third week beginning tomorrow, in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's pretentious and perfectly recorded film version of Sigmund Romberg's operetta of "Maytime." John Barrymore, Luis Alberni, Guy Bates Post, Rafaela Ottiano and a long list of others appear in the supporting cast. The short subjects also will be retained.

So successful has been the first week's run of "History Is Made at Night," with Charles Boyer and Jean Arthur in the costellar roles, at RKO-Keith's, that this engaging subject will be continued through a second week beginning tomorrow. Leo Carrillo and Colin Clive add strength to the cast. The supplementary program will continue with the feature, including "Screen Snapshots" and a new issue of the Pathe News.

"The King and the Chorus Girl," featuring that personable young newcomer to the American screen, Fernand Gravet, and Joan Blondell in the title roles, will be presented for a repeat downtown engagement on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Edward Everett Horton, Mary Nash, Luis Alberni and Alan Mowbray lead the supporting cast in this irresistibly amusing comedy. The bill will be completed by the usual short-reel subjects and full newsreel.

Another repeat engagement will be celebrated at the newly refurbished Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, when "On the Avenue," Irving Berlin's tuneful musical, will resume its midtown popularity. The principal roles are played by Dick Powell and Madeleine Carroll, with George Barbier, Alan Mowbray, Alice Faye and the Three Ritz Brothers leading the support. This subject boasts some of the most melodious songs Berlin ever has written. Short-reel subject and "News of the Day" will be added.

Supplementing the 40 minutes of world news flashes at the Trans-Lux Theater, beginning tomorrow, will be shown the issue of the "March of Time," featuring "Child Labor," "Coronation Crisis" and "Harlem's Black Magic;" Lowell Thomas in "Going Places"—this time to Miami, Fla., "The Winter Wonderland"—and a color fantasy, "Birds in Love."

"Congress Dances," with Lillian Harvey, Conrad Veidt and Henry Garat, will be next week's revival at the Rialto Theater, beginning on Sunday. The companion feature will be one of Fredric March's finest pictures, "Death Takes a Holiday." The bill will be augmented by short screen subjects and newsreels.

The Little Theater next week, beginning Sunday, will present a revival—and this is believed to be the first—of the film version of Eugene O'Neill's genial comedy of "Ah, Wilderness," in which the principal roles are played by Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Cecilia Parker and Eric Linden. Short sound subjects and news added.

Beginning with the usual matinee performance on Sunday afternoon, the attraction at the Gayety Theater will be featured by "The Gypsy Rose Lee of China." Amy Fong, Miss Fong, further described as "China's most beautiful daughter," will be assisted by a sterling group of burlesque comedians, singers and dancers, with Harry Connolly cast in the role of chief funmaker.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

A New Summer Theater Project Insured by Purchase Of Woodlawn Lodge by Veteran Stephen E. Cochran

Nearby Maryland Site Is Bought for Eventual Establishment of Complete Hot Weather Amusement Plant Offering Diversity of Diversion; Fred Rohrs Comes to Washington as Branch Exchange Manager for United Artists; Famous Old-Timers Come Back to Washington to Show What Burlesque Was Like in the "Good Old Days" of 50 Years Ago.

WITH the coming of such spring as we are having and the announcement of the plans of the Roadside Theater for another summer season in the "old red barn," rumblings of other theatrical projects for the duration of the heated term begin to obtrude themselves.

BELL.

For example, there is the possibility that that summer theater colony so long contemplated by Stephen E. Cochran, founder of the National Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts and former manager of the National Theater over a stretch of three decades, finally will eventuate.

We have been a long time getting around to the fact that Mr. Cochran, a week ago today, took up his option on Woodlawn Lodge and purchased that five-acre rural property hard by Olney Inn. This is the first step in the consummation of the plan to inaugurate a real "summer theater," conveniently located for theatergoers from both Washington and Baltimore not to mention the many smaller communities that lie between these two cities and others on both sides of the route.

It is not a surety that the theater colony—it is Mr. Cochran's idea to provide "big-time" theater, symphony concerts and other forms of midsummer diversion when his newly acquired holding is completely equipped to do justice to such an expansive undertaking—can be gotten under way this year. If not, it will be next

Up to now the Woodlawn Lodge tract has been devoted to the requirements of a roadhouse and the serving of chicken dinners in true Maryland style. There is ample space on the property, however, to permit the erection of a commodious and fully equipped summer theater, living quarters for the players, the establishment of a school of drama and an amphitheater for the presentation of orchestral concerts of the first water.

Needless to say, so comprehensive a scheme of summertime theatrical development will need a lot of doing. Mr. Cochran, from his own words to this reporter, is riding the idea hard. It may be that nothing more than the operation of the refectory will mark this first summer of his proprietorship, but it seems a fair certainty—or at least a feasible possibility—that in another year there will spring up a few miles from Washington much the same sort of theatrical colony as those now operating on Cape Cod, at various points in Maine and elsewhere in the East.

If pursued to a successful conclusion, Mr. Cochran's scheme would bring within easy reach of the National Capital the best plays from the New York stage, new manuscript plays and innovations of various sorts not compatible with the conduct of a metropolitan winter season of drama. The best acting talent available will be impressed into service and altogether a fine outlook presents itself for the creative urges of a manager whose life has been devoted to the theater.

It is the earnest hope of this column that the venture in time will come to full fruition and meet with the success which such an enterprise deserves.

It comes to the knowledge of this desk that Fred Rohrs, former branch exchange manager in Charlotte, N. C., and more recently of Atlanta, Ga., has been appointed Washington branch exchange manager for United Artists, to succeed Charles Kranz, resigned. Mr. Rohrs will arrive in the Capital in the near future. In the meantime, the affairs of the Washington office are being conducted by Charles Stern, United Artists sales manager for this territory.

Time is being turned back half a century for old-time theatergoers in Washington this week.

Down at Col. Jimmy Lake's Gayety Theater, Billy "Beef Trust" Watson and his stage partner of many years, Billy "Grogan" Spencer, are reviving a condensed version of Watson's famous "Krausemeyer's Alley" and showing what burlesque used to be like back in the days of the present generation's grand-dads.

The career of Billy Watson encompasses practically the whole history of burlesque in this country. He made his first appearance on the stage at the old Chatham Square Theater in New York in 1881. Fifty-one years ago he made his first Washington appearance at Barton and Logan's Globe Theater at Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue on the site of the old postoffice building—the one still standing with the clock in the tower. Forty years ago he played Col. Snellbaker's Theater Comique, later known as Kernan's Lyceum, directly across Eleventh street. Still later he played the old Bijou, at Ninth street and Market place, later known as the Majestic. It was here that Al Jolson made his first public appearance—after having been tossed out of Sam Gassenheimer's Lawrence Hotel Gardens—on the present site of the Munsey Building—as being too young to work from the floor of a "cabaret."

After that, Watson took out a franchise on the Columbia burlesque wheel and presented "Krausemeyer's Alley" years on end. It then was a complete two-act production, consuming two hours and a half of running time. It now has been whittled down to about three-quarters of an hour.

In those old days, Billy's leading woman was Agnes Behler, who later married Dave Marion, known to burlesque fans as "Snuffy, the Cabman." It was Dave who broke Harry Fox into show business. Harry was the singing lad, with the "wah-wah-wah" style of delivery, who was in perpetual turmoil with Eddie Leonard, the old-time minstrel now making a comeback at the Gay Nineties night club in New York, as to which got there first with this peculiar style of singing. Harry afterward married one of the Dolly Twins and Jean Schwartz, the song-writer and composer, the other.

Billy Watson is making this whirl around the circuit, after ten years of retirement, purely for love of the game. He is a wealthy man, owning theaters, apartment houses and office buildings in Paterson, N. J., his home town, and Brooklyn, N. Y., and also being a heavy land and property owner at Belmar, adjacent to Asbury Park, N. J.

He sold Marcus Loew the first theater Loew ever owned—the Watson Cozy Corner in Brooklyn, for which he received $85,000. Loew later sold the property to the Edison Co. for $200,000.

Those who scoff at burlesque and deem it a negligible factor in American theatricals should take time out to consider the number of "big-time" performers who have sprung from this line of stage activity. It is, of course, impossible to estimate the total number of these graduates of burlesque, but the list would include, among many others, Weber and Fields, David Warfield, George Sidney, Truly Shattuck, Fannie Brice, Leon Errol, who always was cast as comic foil for the late "Blutch" Cooper in "Biff" Clarke's "Jersey Lilies;" Bert Lahr, Bobby Clark and the late Paul McCullough, Lester Allen, Roscoe Ailes, Bickel and Watson, who broke up the old Hurtig and Seamon team of Bickel, Watson and Wrothe, to star in Ziegfeld's "Follies of 1907," first in the line: Gypsy Rose Lee, of the current "Follies," and a host more.

With Billy Watson on this trip are two of his three charming daughters, who wanted to be in Washington to see the cherry blossoms. Billy says they are "G-Women" sent with him by his wife to ride herd on him on the road. Billy is 71 and Billy Spencer is 70.

How do you mean burlesque is no good?

Honest-Confession Note.

Yes, I went to see the "Beef Trust" and got a great "kick" out of it.

Academy Award Winner at Earle

Bette Davis, with many fine screen performanees already to her credit, is said to have one of her most effective roles in "Marked Woman," the screen feature opening tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. In this subject, Miss Davis is supported by an able cast, led by Eduardo Ciannelli and Humphrey Bogart, two of the most sinister "heavies" to be found on either stage or screen.

THE FEDERAL THEATER PROJECT moved its New York offices recently to the Chanin Building here. The new offices occupy three floors in that building . . . Friday afternoon, the officials discovered that a telephone switchboard hadn't been installed as yet—and so they made diligent inquiry to ascertain where such a switchboard . . . which necessarily would have to be one of the largest switchboards ever made . . . could be secured. After hours of investigation, such a switchboard was found and installed there. That tremendous switchboard, they learned, had been used previously for another enterprise of national importance. It had been used at the campaign headquarters here of the Republican National Committee.

She took it from him, stalked out, and then related the circumstances to her husband . . . They must have been kidding you," her spouse assured. "It cost me only $50" . . . The next day she took it to Cartier's, where the same experience occurred—except that she was offered $40,000. After consultation with her husband, she accepted a certified check. In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, April 7.—Settin' Around (Twentieth Century-Fox): Head man Darryl Zanuck, "miracle worker" who lifted this studio from the ground floor to the roof, greeted me today with: "America is in the mood for love." It sounded like a song title, so I cracked back, "What country or woman or man isn't?" But he was serious; his remark was a well thought out bit of philosophy.

VICTOR McLAGLEN.

All forthcoming pictures from his studio, he promises, will be heavily spiced with romance. Proof of the pudding, Darryl said, are some of the company's recent releases, among them the most glorious of all love stories, "Seventh Heaven," "Love Is News," "On the Avenue" and more. "Love, song and laughter are what the world is seeking," Zanuck said. So from now until further notice, you are going to find honey and cream on your movie menu.

I found the "Wee Winnie Winkle" set in a state of suppressed excitement. Inquiry revealed that the script called for Shirley Temple to be spanked. She had been a bad girl and she had to be punished, even as other erring little kiddies. Shirley was looking forward with considerable glee to the filming of the scene, because she has never been spanked (that is, not on-screen, but in real life—well, that is different!).

But June Lang, Shirley's mama in the picture, was the most worried young actress I ever remember seeing. She was in a mood to walk off the set. Perhaps there was reason for worry. She was to do the spanking, and she was not certain how a few million fans who love Shirley would take it. Such screen moments have been known to clip careers short.

Eventually the scene was made though. June administered a few light taps which the sound department will turn into noisy spanks. Meanwhile, the entire troupe stood in absolute silence, awaiting results. And the results were worth waiting for: Up came Shirley with a bright grin, and said, "Oh, that didn't hurt. You'd better have mother show you how, and we'll retake the scene."

On the same set, Victor McLaglen was having trouble remembering some of the complicated lines of this Rudyard Kipling story. At last the director grew impatient and suggested that Vic had not studied his script carefully. McLaglen was not in humor for criticism and mumbled, "Aw, I know my lines." "That may be," snapped the director, "but you don't know Kipling's."

The happiest set I have visited of late was for "This Is My Affair." No wonder, with Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor again co-starring. Anybody who tells you this romance is on the wane is crazier than Napoleon in the state insane asylum. What a cinch they were having rehearsing love scenes; I am sure they would not have objected had the kissing sequences gone on for days. Bob has gone so utterly romantic that he orders coffee for the entire company every morning. Today there were 250 extras plus Fidler present, but Bob did not bat an eye as he put in the usual order.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, April 7.

FOR A GROUP of gallant and high-hearted girls who are as brave and steady-nerved as they are lovely, I know none to equal the pretty hostesses who fly the airways ministering to the needs of the men and women who want to get somewhere quickly.

ALICE HUGHES

I never visit our Newark Airport, over the river in Jersey, without looking up my friends among them, the girls with whom I've flown, and I always find them sunny, poised and all lighted up with personal nad professional charm.

All their danger is called into play after a crash, when one of their number goes down with the ship, the pilots and the passengers. Not long ago Doris Hammons lost her life near Pittsburgh. A few days later I saw her room-mate, Alberta Tynes, boarding a ship about to take off for the West. "There's nothing to be afraid of," she told me. "The news about Doris was a terrible shock, of course, but she'd have been killed, probably, if she'd been in that bus that burned the other day." A little fatalistic, like soldiers, these flying beauties!

As you know, the marriage rate among them is tremendous—and most of them tie up with pilots and ground bosses of the lines they fly. This is beginning a series of air dynasties like those of the theater and the circus, whose people so consistently marry within their own little worlds. In 20 years handsome young men will be at the controls of cloudland fliers—the sons of pilots and pretty hostesses of the early thirties! Bred to the higher air.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Dorothy Thompson, the brilliant reporter and columnist who may be my candidate for President in '44, just won another great distinction. Dot, who is Mrs. Sinclair Lewis when out of the spotlight, recently lectured at our Harvard Club—the only woman in its long history to be invited to speak to the lads. She told 'em a few home truths, and was the hit of the season.

* * * *

The most beautiful event of the local sports season was the superb ice carnival which glittered four nights at Madison Square Garden. A lovelier sight I've never seen. Melitta Brunner, the blonde Viennese pro, made her American debut in two gorgeous numbers; little Audrey Peppe did a thrilling solo, and our Maribel Vinson, the American champ, skated handsomely, though she came down with a thump on her derriere in the course of a number. Poor Maribel cried hysterically in her dressing room—a thing like that to happen to a champ before 16,000 people.

* * * *

Tragedy of the carnival—Frankie James, the former vaudeville headliner, broke out a $4,000 ermine coat for the first time. "I smell something burning," she said to me, all of a sudden. Something was. A careless kid in the next box, agog at the whirls of the fair Melitta, had burned a hole right through the ermine sleeve with a cigarette. And all the little brute said was "Excuse me!"

* * * *

Our crowded subways are always a mess, in many ways. Pinchers, for instance. Girls don't like the publicity involved in turning these "men" over to the coppers, but now and then one is caught and given little mercy. Joe Mont, haled to court for pinching several girls, told the honorable judge that when the train lurched, he just grabbed to save himself a fall. "Phooey," said His Honor, in good legal language. "Ten days!" And Pinching Joe rests in the cooler.

* * * *

Eric Moller, the milliner, hales me into his studio to see his "match hat." Made of soft yellow felt, it is trimmed with huge yellow matches made of many tiny feathers and tipped with electric blue. Under one side of the brim is an oblong of brown grosgrain ribbon — the scratcher. Very nifty and nobby for afternoon wear, and all it needs is a sign saying "Strike me!" And, for that matter, some cad might.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

NEAL likes to take long Sunday morning hikes, and he always wants Nina to come along tramping through the woods with him.

"But, goodness," said Nina, "Neal can sit down when he gets back, and I have to start dinner. That means I'm walking just about all day long. I'd like to have a speedometer to see just how many miles a day I do!"

Men never realize how much exercise a woman gets just in the course of an average day. Or maybe they do, because they are responsible for most of the step saver appliances. We've just been seeing a lot of those metal cupboards and cabinets that fit together in units and make the most convenient places to work with wide counter tops and fine vermin proof storage cabinets, plate warmer cabinets and towel drier compartments. Then there is that very impressive new garbage disposal affair that now comes with some of the new sinks. You just dump your garbage down the drain and it is mechanically pulverized and washed away.

But there are a lot of step savers you can introduce that won't cost as much as these, such as having racks for kitchen towels in reach of the working centers and arranging for the storage of various articles of food in reach of the place you prepare them for cooking. And having plenty of trays handy to make one trip take the place of three in carrying dishes in for setting the table or in assembling the ingredients for a recipe, or collecting pots and pans to wash. Little changes but they'll save you miles.

Send a stamped self-addressed envelope for the writer's bulletin "Bright Kitchens."

Wear Any Costume You Like, If Becoming And Suitable, Asserts Noted Paris Stylist

Mme. Alphone Tiberchien, Here With Her Husband for Textile Session, Gives Hints on Proper Dress.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

YOU CAN WEAR anything you like if it is becoming and suitable to the occasion, maintains Mme. Alphone Tiberchien, a Parisian noted for her chic who has accompanied her husband—the French representative to the World Textile Congress—to Washington.

As she discussed clothes yesterday at the Hotel Raleigh, Mme. Tiberchien expounded the French philosophy of feminine dress. Here are some of its high points:

Simplicity with careful attention to detail is the keynote of style.

Women should always wear flattering clothes regardless of style trends.

They should never buy clothes they do not "like a lot."

They should dress to please men rather than women.

A few clothes well chosen and in good taste are better than a larger variety of mediocre garments.

Taking good care of clothes is as important as selecting them.

Accessories and perfume are "tremendously important."

Discussing current trends in French styles, Mme Tiberchien said that while French women still considered black the smartest color for any occasion, there was a decided trend toward color in the wardrobe for spring and summer.

Color Combination Important.

The French woman has an inborn sense about combining colors, Mme. Tiberchien maintains, and of this her wardobe is proof. "This is my favorite dress" she said, donning an intricate creation of black and pouder blue by Schiaparelli. It was made in three pieces; a one-piece affair of black silk crepe with the blue fashioning a deep yoke in back and a narower one in front. Over this went an apron-like creation, slit in the back with buttons; the final touch was a bolero. To top this outfit Mme. Tiberchien had chosen a chic little chapeau of black eyelet organdy, trimmed with two poudre blue birds. "Birds are everywhere in Paris this spring," she explained.

Accessories, Mme. Tiberchien contends, are of tremendous importance and whether they should contrast or harmonize with the costume, depends entirely on the styling and color theme of the costume. To illustrate this she displayed two, totally different ensembles. One, for afternoon, was of black crinkly crepe, with dusty pink cuffs and tiny collar—the gloves for this were of dusty pink suede, and the hat, a black straw with a touch of pink. Mustard yellow, sheer wool, accented with brown, comprised the colors for the other creation, a coat-dress. The basic colors were repeated in the accessories, rather than a contrasting shade.

Quality Not Quantity.

While Mme. Tiberchien's spring wardrobe is indeed extensive, she advocates a few clothes well-chosen, smart and in good taste, rather than a larger variety of clothes which are mediocre. For the business woman who must budget her income, she suggests the basic dress or suit idea, with a variety of accents to lend the illusion of more costumes. For this method, black and navy blue are the best colors, Mme. Tiberchien advised. "Never buy anything you do not like a lot, and which is not becoming, regardless of style trends," she admonished; "I have several outfits which I have had for two years and which I still like and always enjoy wearing."

To verify the Parisian designers' claim that any woman can wear a printed costume well this spring regardless of the size of the pattern, Mme. Tiberchien exhibited two printed evening gowns. One with huge white bow knots on a black ground, was extremely becoming to her, although she is short of stature and inclined to plumpness. The other gown was black with large roses in pastel tints.

Harris & Ewing.

MME. ALPHONSE TIBERCHIEN.

"Perfume is tremendously important for smart grooming," Mme. Tiberchien said with emphasis, "I use a light, elusive fragrance for daytime, and a heavier scent for formal clothes. French women dress to please their husbands," Mrs. Tiberchien volunteered, and aim to be smart rather than pretty. But, in every instance, they always strive to appear more attractive than they really are."

"American women do not seem to care much about jewelry, that is real jewels," commented Mme. Tibercihen. "French women love their jewels and take great pride in wearing them, particularly with formal clothes."

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Parted by Quarrel Which He Pronounced "Final," Youth Asks How to Make Peace With Girl He Loves.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a very nice girl for about six months. I love her and I think she loves me, but a friend of mine said she told him she didn't love me. I can't believe him because he is known for telling falsehoods. During the time we were going together we had frequent quarrels, which prompted me to tell her once that our next quarrel would be our last; that if we ever quarreled again we would separate permanently. I didn't mean it and I don't know what made me say it.

* * * *

Since then we have had another quarrel and she assumed this was final. Do you think I should write and tell her I never meant what I said, or just what should I do? I am sure she will forgive me, because each time before when we fell out she forgave me if I was the one at fault, just as I forgave her if she was at fault. She doesn't think I love her.

* * * *

Can you tell me how to convince her that I love her? Do you think it is selfishness in me to want her all to myself? She once said she would be mine alone. We are both high school students. Please advise me, and thanks a million. SCHOOLBOY.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR SCHOOLBOY: It is just possible the girl doesn't care for you as much as you care for her, and that she welcomed your last quarrel as an expedient opportunity for breaking off the association. If she really believed you meant what you said about one more quarrel's being the end of your friendship, and really cared for you, it seems to me that she would have been at some pains to mend the quarrel before you took your departure on that occasion; that she would have given some sign that she valued your devotion too much to lose it. It seems to me she would have said something to this effect: "Please, don't let's fight like this. Why do we do it? You know I like you and I can't understand why we quarrel. Etc, etc."

* * * *

However, there's no understanding the way of a maid with a man. For so often a girl doesn't understand her own feelings and actions in regard to a given beau. Maybe this girl would prove to be just as eager to patch up things as you are. So I suggest you give her the chance. Pay no attention to the discouraging remarks of your falsifying friend. Maybe she told him she doesn't love you and maybe she didn't. Even if she did, she may have been consciously denying her own heart in saying so. Naturally she wouldn't want her schoolmates—particularly the boys—to believe she was still in love with you or ever had been, if she figured all was over between you. The average youth doesn't waste much time on a girl who is known to be in love with someone else. And the average girl, no matter how deeply interested she may be in one boy, realizes the wisdom of keeping others hoping and dancing attendance.

* * * *

You've put yourself in an awkward position from which to take the initiative in mending the latest quarrel, but you'll just have to make the best of it. Don't be too abject. Write and tell her you've learned that you'd rather quarrel with her than live in peace with anyone else. Ask her if she won't forgive you and forget that foolish statement you made some time ago, which you didn't mean at the time, and consistently regret having said.

Tell her that you really care for her and that if she will give you one more chance to be friends, you expect to do everything in your power to prove how much you care. Tell her that so far as you are concerned, there will be no more quarrels; that you propose from now on to hold your tongue and your temper when you see a fight coming on. Such a letter should convince her that you love her.

I daresay it is selfish to want her all to yourself, but it is a selfishness characteristic of persons in love. However, it is rather foolish for school boys and girls to promise to be "each other's alone." They may have best beaux and best girls, but each should also have other friends of the opposite sex. M. H.

The Source of Peace.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You have recently published two letters from young men who have taken to drink because of trouble. One snapped out of drink because he saw it was doing more harm than good and then relapsed into his cups again. You advised work as a cure. That is good advice as far as it goes, but it will not bring peace of mind and these men seem to want peace.

So now I feel that I'd like to tell them that only God can bring peace into their lives, because He helps us to bear our sorrows and troubles. I know, because I, too, have had troubles and when I went to Him He helped me and gave me peace. Please tell these men I'm not a preacher, but just another person wanting and having found peace.

ANONYMOUS.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I am taking this means of bringing your message to the attention of "Icarus" and "F. T. P." I am sure they will appreciate the sincerity of your wish to help them in their hour of need. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

The old saw about keeping the doctor away with an apple has had a sudden rejuvenation in the growing use of scraped raw apple as a method of treatment.

It was first used by Heisler, a general practitioner, in Koenigsburg, Germany, who observed that infants with dysentary fed on scraped raw apples improved faster than with any other treatment he ever had observed. At first he tried it in combination with other usual diets for this condition, and then selected a series of cases to which he gave only scraped raw apples. In this series patients made a more complete recovery than any other series.

Proved Effective.

His paper, published in 1928, came to the attention of Prof. Moro, the head of the department of diseases of children at Heidelberg, who tried it out and substantiated all of Heisler's findings. The system of treatment has come to be known as the Moro-Heisler two-day apple diet.

Claims made for this are: (1) The exclusive use of raw ripe apples brings an almost immediate symptomatic relief to infants ill with various types of bowel infections; (2) the temperature drops within the first 24 hours; (3) the number and consistency of the stools change abruptly at the onset of treatment; (4) at least 90 per cent of the cases, regardless of severity, are symptomatically well within 48 hours; (5) there is difficulty experienced in returning some cases to milk diet, relapses occurring which require additional days of apple treatment.

Absorbs Poison.

The method by which this acts is puzzling. It is generally supposed that there is some ingredient in the scraped apple which has the effect of absorbing the poisonous products of the bacterial infection of the intestine.

The treatment has been broadened to apply to other conditions. For instance, to prepare patients for surgical operations. One such case concerned a minor operation under general anesthetic, lasting 10 minutes, performed on a young woman 24 years of age. This patient intended to go home the evening of the surgical procedure, but it was three days before she was well enough, and had recovered from her ether sickness, to leave the hospital. Six months later it was necessary to do a more severe operation on this patient. Remembering the previous experience she was instructed to eat 15 apples a day for several days before the operation. Results were quite astonishing. She had no post-operative nausea, and a complete absence of post-operative intestinal colic.

Similar to Sprew.

The action of raw apple pulp is somewhat similar to that seen in the intestinal disturbance known as sprew, sometimes found in the southern part of the United States. This can be cured practically without the use of medication by a diet consisting of strawberries and visceral products, such as liver and kidney.

If the simple scraped raw apple is added to other articles of diet, such as milk, it is not so likely to give good results.

Clendening can now be obtained by sending ten cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendenning, in care of The Washington Post. The pamphlets are "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "Care of the Hair and Skin."

White Dress Needs Gay-Colored Shoes

Orry Kelly, Hollywood designer, says not to match shoes to pastel summer ensembles this year. Wear white shoes with pastels and gay or light-colored shoes with white dresses. The only time white shoes are good with white frocks is when the shoes are brightened up with multicolored embroidery. Kelly recently did some white poplin pumps with richly embroidered toes for Ann Sheridan, movie actress. Another warning from Kelly is not to wear toeless sandals on the street. They are for formal and informal wear, but never for "in-between."

8 Specifications Drafted as Ideal In Foster Parent

Eight specifications for the ideal foster parents have been drawn up by the Child Placing and Adoption Committee of the State Charities Aid Association of New York

Whereas prospective foster parents usually lay down certain specifications for the children they want, they themselves should come up to definite standards, according to the committee. The requirements for foster parents follow:

The motive for adoption should be the same which prompts people to want children of their own.

Not rich, but must have reasonable financial stability.

Must have normally harmonious family life.

Living conditions of the family must be suitable.

Character of the foster parents must conform to generally accepted standards of the community.

Health of foster parents must be such that there will be no danger to the child.

Must be the same religion as the child.

Must have some flexibility of viewpoint.

Learn to Talk Correctly

DAISY'S good time is shot! Bob's ashamed of her when he's with his smart friends. He turns to charming Mary whose talk shows she's "his kind."

At the track meet, Daisy said, "That dark-COMPLECTED boy ALMOST jumped 6 feet." "Complectioned," Daisy, not "complected." And to say "almost jumped" means he didn't jump at all. Put the almost in front of the "6 feet" and make yourself crystal clear.

People whose speech is admired don't say "I suspicioned it" for "I suspected it;" "he enthused" for "he was enthusiastic;" "between you and I" for "between you and me."

Your speech will be smoother if you shave off the capitalized words in "off OF," 'all OF the food," "ate UP," 'outside OF the door," where is he AT?" "where's he going TO?"

And when you write, don't confuse "stationery" which means letter paper with "stationary," immovable; "allude" which means to refer to, with "elude," to evade.

When you're comparing ages of two people, say "Tom is older," not "Tom is the oldest." Use "oldest" only when you're talking of three or more people. Say "different from," not "different than" or "different to."

Our 40-page booklet, "Common Errors in English," points out the little slips of speech that annoy cultivated people. Learn the smooth substitute for these errors. Make your speech acceptable anywhere.

Secretary and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring Are Hosts at Tea At Beautiful Colonial Estate, Woodlawn, Near Alexandria

Historic Home Decorated With Spring Flowers for Function Attended by Members of Official and Diplomatic Sets and Wives.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Several hundred guests drove through the spring sunshine to Woodlawn, beyond Alexandria, Va., yesterday afternoon for the first of two "at homes" at which the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring entertained.

State police, on the highway, directed those to whom the route was unfamiliar and, from the gates of the estate to the historic house which is situated on the crest of a hill overlooking the countryside, Army men in uniform pointed the way up the winding lane. Inside the home of the Secretary there were also Army, Navy and Marine Corps aides, including some who assist at White House functions.

The house, which was built by George Washington for Nellie Custis, is one of the lovely old colonial homes of Virginia and is just beyond Mount Vernon. The warm weather made it possible yesterday to have the doors open and to move the punch tables out onto the terrace, when the dining room became crowded. Branches of blossoms and a profusion of flowers were used throughout the rooms, giving the atmosphere of spring inside, as well as out.

Mrs. Woodring, who received in the drawing room, wore a frock of hyacinth blue, simply made and of street length, and a corsage of orchids. Beside her was Capt. William L. Ritchie, aide to Secretary Woodring, who made the introductions. The Secretary greeted the guests as they went into the adjoining room or mingled with them in the dining room. There Easter lilies were used as the centerpiece for the tea table. Those who alternated in pouring included Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, of the Cabinet wives; Mme. Fotitch and Frau von Boetticher, Mrs. Malin Craig, who was accompanied by Gen. Craig, and Mrs. William Stanley. Also assisting were Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Julian Schley, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan.

An orchestra played during the afternoon and many of the guests took occasion to look through the rooms of the old house or to stand on the veranda at the rear and view the far-reaching landscape. The two older children of the Secretary and Mrs. Woodring, who are usually the center of much attention when their parents entertain at an afternoon party, are still in Florida so were missed yesterday, but will be home in time for the second reception at Woodlawn on April 21.

Among the guests were Miss Pauletta Guffey, who wore a costume of navy blue, her small hat, handbag and gloves all of the exact shade of her suit; her sister, Miss Ida Guffey; Baroness von Below, Col. and Mrs. Allen Gullion, Capt. and Mrs. H. B. Dorsey, Mrs. Dorsey in a plum-colored dress with a wide-brimmed silk hat of the same shade and a fox scarf; Mme. San Germano, Mrs. Charles E. Riggs, Mrs. Marvin McIntyre, Mrs. Albert Niblack, Mrs. Wallace Dempsey, who was with the Misses Mary and Elizabeth Howry; Mrs. Brady Ruttencutter, Mrs. Caleb C. Motz, Miss Louise Nelson, Mrs. Consuelo A. Seoane, Mrs. Thomas Burke, wife of the postmaster of the District; Gen. and Mrs. Walter Kruger and Mrs. Ernest Draper.

The Minister of the Irish Free State, Mr. Michael MacWhite, and the Minister of the Union of South Africa, Mr. Ralph William Close, were among those present from the Diplomatic Corps, as were the Counselor of the Soviet Embassy, Mr. Constantine Oumansky, the Military Engineer and Mme. Begunov and the Assistant Military Attache and Mme. Okunev, as well as the Military Attache of the German Embassy, who accompanied his wife, Mme. von Boetticher, who was assisting, and the Secretary of the Legation of Yugoslavia and Mme. Perazic, who were among those arriving during the latter part of the afternoon.

Others among the many guests were Mr. Fernando Chiapparelli, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas Hart, Miss Margaret Ayers, Mrs. South Trimble, jr., and Mrs. Jack Houston, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, wearing a becoming redingote costume of navy blue over a lighter shade and the same combination of color on her broad-brimmed straw hat; Mrs. Andrew May, accompanied by Mrs. Sidney Hosmer, of Cincinnati, who is visiting her; Representative and Mrs. Maury Maverick, Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Albert J. Bowley, who were accompanied by Col. and Mrs. John Greely; Mrs. Harry Fulton, with her daughter, Miss Carrie Roper Fulton; Col. and Mrs. Walter S. Grant, Mrs. Arthur H. Tirrell, and her daughter, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, whose black frock had deep fringe from the short tunic to the bottom of the skirt and whose small black hat of beret type was trimmed with a row of small red poppies; Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Tuckerman and Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol.

Miss Elsa Maxwell Coming Here For Dance of W. Forbes Morgans

Miss Elsa Maxwell, the country's most famous party-giver, will come to Washington for the dance at which Mr. and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan are entertaining on Saturday evening at the Sulgrave Club. She is expected to be the guest of Mrs. Nicholas Longworth during her stay here.

Washington society hoped for a glimpse of Miss Maxwell at Mrs. Evalyn McLean's ball on New Year's eve, but at the last moment she was unable to come.

She is generally credited with originating the "scavenger hunt," which had members of society spending many hectic evenings searching New York for such difficult finds as policemen's badges and red flannel underwear. Last winter she put on a farm party at the Waldorf Astoria with a hog-caller imported from the West, several genuine cows, and an assortment of pigs. Everybody came dressed in gingham and overalls, and the distinguished guests included Mr. and Mrs. Dougles Fairbanks, Constance Bennett and Kay Francis.

Mr. and Mrs. James Gerard, who will be honor guest at the ball, are expected to come to Washington tomorrow and will be at the Mayflower. They are sailing for London April 20 for the coronation, at which Mr. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany, will represent President Roosevelt.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan will give a large dinner at the Sulgrave Club preceding the dance. Others entertaining beforehand include the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, the Third Secretary of the French Embassy and Mme. Charles Saint and Mrs. Higginson Rogers.

Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Holcomb, were guests of honor for whom Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Clifton Bledsoe Cates entertained at a dinner at the Shoreham last evening.

Mrs. Holcomb's sister, Miss Dora Clover, of Paris, France, who is visiting the Commandant and Mrs. Holcomb, was among the company, as was Col. Cates' mother, Mrs. Willis J. Cates, of Memphis, Tenn., who is visiting Col. and Mrs. Cates. Covers were laid for 19.

Gen. John J. Pershing, recently returned from a trip abroad, arrived in Washington yesterday and is occupying a suite at the Carlton Hotel.

Group Capt. T. E. B. Howe, Air Attache of the British Embassy, who left Sunday evening by plane to visit military posts and aircraft factories on the West Coast, expects to return in ten days to the Shoreham, where he resides. He will return by way of Kansas City.

The MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

After their arrival in Latvia, our First Secretary to the legation there and his wife, the Earl Packers, were kept busy house hunting. Finally after weary hours of searching the various sections of Riga, they found a house that seemed to answer their needs. It is an attractive place, with large rooms that fairly clamor for furniture to be scattered about—but alas—, there is not one solitary closet in it! This meant that something had to be done and quickly—some sort of old-fashioned "wardrobe" had to be found.

Well, the wardrobe was obtained and then troubles started anew. The moving men carried it into the room which was to house it—and there started a game of many moves. The piece of furniture is a mammoth affair. When it was placed along one side of the room, it shut off the door—then at another angle, it walled up the windows and that couldn't be. The result is that the wardrobe is practically Lord of the Mansion and rules the household from the very center of the room, a veritable island of mahogany.

Mary Blake, Betty Marsh and Randy Richardson can always be counted upon to think up something unusual. This time it is to be a party Saturday evening at Willard Hall in Fairfax. (No, we admit there is nothing so startling about a dance, but you haven't seen the invitations, or have you?) They are very clever. On the usual cream and green post cards, some artistic soul has sketched in green ink, a couple doing what we think must be a Cake Walk. In the upper left-hand corner are the names of the three hostesses and the necessary information concerning the What, When, Why and Where of the occasion.

Just as we were leaving the Shoreham the other evening whom should we run into but Betsy Perrow Putnam (Mrs. Carleton Putnam, if you please) who with her bright-eyed little Scottie, Annie Laurie, was about to go for a stroll in the crisp spring air.

Sailing, sailing, over the bounding main—that is precisely what Marjorie Jane Dampman and her mother are doing this minute. Finding Washington somewhat dullish, they up and took themselves off, boarded the S. S. Brittanic and set sail for Southern waters. After cruising about down there where the sea is as smooth as glass and giant turtles sun themselves on the surface of the blue-green mirror and regard the passing ships without the least bit of curiosity, the Dampmans, will "do" the islands and then head for home again.

Saw Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Albert J. Bowley having breakfast in the Mayflower yesterday morning. The general, who really does look like Clive Brook, was attired in a dark Oxford gray suit. Mrs. Bowley was in dark blue, her light weight woolen frock having a three-quarter length cape—one of those tailored ones with that seamed shoulder effect. Her hat was of blue baku straw, with a slightly rolled brim.

Paris (U.P.).—The coronation has inspired all sorts of new styles. Red, white and blue prints are shown everywhere—in cotton for the beach and country and in silk for town wear. Crowns, scepters, coronets and the rose of the House of York frequently are featured on prints as well as lames and brocades for evening.

One house shows a gold lame dotted with stitched royal insignia and embroidered with the words "God Save the King."

Many Countries Represented At Textile Conference's Tea

High Commissioner of India, Mme. Paitre of France Among Miss Perkins' Guests at Party.

By Dudley Harmon.

The Sulgrave Club resembled a small League of Nations yesterday afternoon when Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, entertained at a tea for delegates to the Textile Conference. The guests represented many lands and ranged from the tall Sir Frederick Noon, High Commissioner of India, who wore his native turban, to petite Mme. Marguerite Paitre, of France, one of the three women members of the conference.

In several respects yesterday's tea was quite a "different" party. In the first place, there was no receiving line. Miss Perkins simply stood in a room off the hall and greeted her guests—wearing a black silk frock and a small beret—not tricorne—hat with a tiny veil. She was assisted during the afternoon by Mrs. Harper Sibley, Miss Mary La Dame, Mrs. Marion Folsom and Mrs Richardson Saunders. Mrs. Thomas Eliot, young wife of the general counsel for the Social Securities Board, also saw that the delegates met the Washingtonians and vice versa. Mrs. Eliot's brown straw hat exactly matched the tweed suit she wore.

Of greatest interest during the afternoon was the turban worn by the Indian High Commissioner. Made of yellow tulle in a pale pastel shade, it was looped about his head and tied in a large bow at one side.

As the program for the occasion, a Negro group sang spirituals as they stood beside a piano placed at the head of the stairs. Most of the guests had never heard anything quite like it before, and conversation ceased as they gathered around to listen.

Men were definitely in the majority yesterday, outnumbering the women guests 4 to 1. The three women delegates present were Mme. Paitre, who holds an important position with the French Ministry of Labor, and says that it is not as unusual as most Americans seem to think for her women compariots to hold such positions; Mme. Genevieve Laverriere, from the International Labor Office in Geneva, and Mlle. Gertrude Stenbock, of Holland.

Several members of the Diplomatic Corps, who have done entertaining for their delegates, were present at yesterday's tea, including Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador; Jonkheer H. W. van Haersma de With, Netherlands Minister, with the counselor, Count Reuchten; the Commercial Counselor of the Legation and Mme. Molekamp, the latter wearing a navy blue cloth suit with a striped silk blouse in a brighter blue; the Irish Free State Minister, Mr. Michael MacWhite, and the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera. Also present was Mme. Miguel Echegeray, wife of the former Agricultural Counselor of the Spanish Embassy.

Those who poured tea during the afternoon were Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mrs. John G. Winant, Mrs. Leifur Magnusson. Mrs. John L. Lewis, wife of the labor leader; Mrs. James Wilson, Mrs. Daniel W. Tracy and Miss Ethel M. Johnson. Miss Suzanne Wilson, daughter of the hostess, came in at the end of the afternoon, wearing a black cloth suit trimmed with Persian lamb and a close-fitting black hat.

Tigers Blast Pair of Hurlers in Outslugging Nats, 12 to 10

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Orlando, Fla.

The late Frank Navin, former owner of the Detroit Club, for two years refused Manager Mickey Cochrane permission to buy his great, good friend and former teammate, Al Simmons, from the White Sox. At Navin's death, the new Detroit owners announced that "Mr. Navin's policies with respect to the Tigers will be strictly followed."

POVICH.

Cochrane's first act after the change in ownership was to buy Simmons from the White Sox.

Jake Powell's absence from the regular Yankee line-up this spring is occasioning no surprise among the ball players in the league. Off the record, they will say that Powell was never a big leaguer, just lucky.

Young Johnny Vander Meer, of the Reds, who is an apparent inch to become the new strikeout king of the National League and is supposed to throw a faster ball than Bob Feller, was scouted for two weeks by the Nats last season.

But that was before Scout Joe Engel learned that he was the property of the Cincinnati Club.

Newsom Has Valet.

Buck Newsom emphatically denies it, but it is apparent that he has had a valet-chauffeur in attendance on him ever since he reported to the Nats' training camp.

A lad whom Newsom calls "Tompkins," shares the big pitcher's apartment at the Nats' hotel, is always at the wheel of Newsom's car, respectfully awaits orders, prances out to the diamond with Newsom's sweater when the pitcher gets on base and anticipates Buck's every need, by jove!

The Washington Club made a great hue and cry about its attempts to buy Outfielder Pete Fox from the Detroit Tigers, but the truth is that Al Simmons was always the object of their desires. Griffith's strategy in masking his efforts to get Simmons saved him thousands of dollars when the deal was finally made.

"Simmons goes to Washington," the headliners read, and Buck Newsom searched in vain for what he hoped would be the other half of the story, namely: "—and Newsom goes to Detroit."

Some Fun, Eh?

Genial Phil Troy, traveling secretary of the "nouveau riche" Boston Red Sox, whose lavish entertainment of the press in recent years has earned that club steadily favorable notices, was flabbergasted the other day in Tampa when invited to the hotel bar by a baseball writer.

* * * *

"Jeez," said Phil, "this is the first time in my 21 years of traveling with ball clubs that a baseball writer is going to pay for my drink."

"The sky's the limit," the correspondent told him, and together they were at the bar for the greater part of the evening.

* * * *

The scribe then took the accumulated checks, accepted Troy's thanks, and, as the Red Sox secretary left the place, boldly inscribed across the back of all the tabs; "Charge to Phil Troy, Room No. 520, Boston Red Sox Baseball Club."

Which recalls to this department that last year at Knoxville when a bunch of boys found that their taproom bill had mounted to terrific figures, they became panicky, then hit upon a way out.

They unblushingly signed the check: "Cecil Travis, Washington Baseball Club," despite the fact that Travis' greatest offense in a drinking line is a chocolate milkshake.

Jack Miley, the New York baseball writer who was set upon and beaten up by the Cardinals' Gas House Gang at Tampa, missed a bet in his by-line story of the fray when he didn't sign it "By Jack Miley, He Who Got Slapped."

In Short.

Pepper Martin had no part in the Gas House Gang's assault on Miley, according to eyewitnesses . . . who swear that Martin was calmly sitting on the floor throughout the battle, carefully counting the nickel jack pot he had just wrung out of a slot machine! . . . Following another impromptu battle between a guest and a Red Sox player in the same Tampa Hotel, the management laughingly announced it was spreading resin on the lobby floor and was replacing the floor lamps with ring posts . . .

* * * *

The Red Sox player was an innocent bystander when set upon by the inebriated guest, who later apologized, and offered to buy drinks all around . . . "or we'll start fighting all over again, makes no difference to me," the drunk continued, "Fight or frolic, that's my motto" . . . Anytime that Ed Linke wants to quit pitching and take a fling at an outfield job with the Nats, he can have the chance, says Bucky Harris . . . who respects the fat pitcher's hitting and intimates that Linke in any event may be the Washington Club's No. 1 pinch hitter next season.

Sharkey's 66 Ties Mark, Wins Prep Golf Medal

Congratulations Are Due on a Record-Tying 66

St. John's 1st Despite Play Of Gonzagan

Purple Is Second by 1½ Points; Georgetown Prep Is Third.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Francis "Buddy" Sharkey, Gonzago honor student, ripped the tricky Georgetown Prep School layout wide open yesterday, and, with a scorching putter, annexed the school's eighth annual Invitation Tourney Medal with a record-tying 66.

Out in par, after a bad second shot cost him a 5 on the first hole, Sharkey compiled an assortment of pars and birdies on the second trip around the Little Hoyas' home course that tied Billy Dettweiler's 66, made in the qualifying round of the same tourney two years ago.

Dick Meyer, St. John's ace, and Buddy Bowie, lone entry from St. Alban, tied for the runner-up honors with creditable 73s, but were 7 strokes behind the pace-setting Sharkey. Meyer was the only other golfer of the day to break par, coming back in 34, aided by an 8-footer on the final green.

Despite Sharkey's efforts, the defending champion Gonzaga team trailed St. John's by 1½ points for the R. Harris Trophy. Semifinalists, finalists and the winner each receive 5 more points toward the team trophy. Georgetown Prep was in third place with 5 points, St. Alban, 3½, and Devitt and Landon, 2. No Woodward entrants qualified.

Sharkey will face Frank Guttenplan, of Devitt, in the first-round matches starting Saturday morning on the Prep course. The feature first-round encounter, however, finds Dick Meyer facing Jackie Dettweiler, host luminary. The latter was off form in carding a 47 in the first round but came back with a 40 to barely make the championship grade.

Eight 3s dotted the husky Gonzagan's card, five finding the cup

Salveson, DeShong Give Up 18 Safeties

Sington Clouts Home Run; Greenberg Hits Two; Mihalic Gets 3 Base Blows as Pitchers Give the Game Away.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Lakeland, Fla., April 7.—The tidings today are very sad to relate, folk. The Nats met up with a rude gang of Detroit Tigers here in the orange belt and were slapped down by the awful figures of 12 to 10.

At that, it might have been worse. Jimmy DeShong and Jack Salveson, the Washington pitchers, did manage to to escape with their lives. They were showing great bravery under fire, but little stuff on the ball. By dint of continual ducking, however, they avoided decapitation by the barrage of 18 Detroit base hits.

It was a crazy ball game in which the Nats actually bounced in front after DeShong had pitched the Tigers into a 5-to-1 lead in the first two innings. Washington inched upon the Tigers with a pair of runs in the fourth inning of Schoolboy Rowe and then performed the feat of scoring four runs on one hit in the sixth.

Officiating on the pitchers' mound for the Tigers in that sixth was a young right-hander named Dizzy Grout, from Terre Haute. Trout, according to the record books, spent his boyhood knocking insulators off telegraph poles out Terre Haute way in an effort to gain control, but it must have been bad practice.

Walks Six Nats.

Anyway, whatever he may have had out there on the pitching mound in that sixth, he didn't have control. He walked six Washington athletes during the inning, forced three runs over the plate, and the Nats went to the front, 7 to 5.

Jimmy DeShong had committed some pretty horrible pitching out there in the first five innings, when he served the Tigers nine hits and five runs, but he was a hero compared to Jack Salveson, who occupied the mound for the Nats thereafter.

Against Salveson, the Tigers began to hit almost strictly for distance. Hank Greenberg walloped his first pitch into the rhubarb far beyond the left field fence and a bit later Rudy York nudged a triple into center, tying the score at 7-7

Terps Meet Harvard in Lacrosse, Cornell on Diamond.

Baseball and lacrosse players from bean-eating Boston join forces with Maryland and George Washington today in supplying those addicted to collegiate sports with the major portion of a three-item program.

George Washington's diamonders cross bats with Boston University at 2:30 o'clock on the East Ellipse, while out in Maryland the lacrossemen come to blows with Harvard. The Old Line baseball team has a date with Cornell for the third engagement of the day.

Both baseball teams are winding up Southern trips, and both seem capable of offering the local delegations all the competition they can handle in a single afternoon. Boston has a hard-hitting club boasting a team average of .275, which, coupled with a large and reputedly good pitching staff, augurs well for its chances.

Cornell always gives Maryland a run for its money, or gets a couple for itself. Last year they divided two games. Today's game, incidentally, is the first of two, the second to be played tomorrow.

Maryland's lacrosse line-up probably will be Jack Kelly, goal; Buddy Yaeger, point; Johnny Page, cover point; Oden Bowie, first defense; Jim Meade, second defense; Rip Hewitt, center; Parker Lindsay, second attack; Charlie Ellinger, first attack; Bob Nielson, out home, and Bill Groff, in-home. The Terps expect to take Harvard without undue exertion, and the match is more or less a warm-up for Saturday's duel with a tough Baltimore A. C. ten.

Cornell Linksmen Meet Georgetown at Kenwood

Georgetown University's six-man golf team opens its season on the Kenwood links today opposing the visiting Cornell team. Maury Nee, Billy Dettweiler and Harvey Johnson, local boys, will comprise half the Hoya team.

Cornell is a member of the Eastern League, but today's match is not an official league encounter. It is a delayed start for the Hilltoppers, who were originally scheduled to have completed a 10-match Southern trip that was postponed.

Cummings Launches Major League Probe

Justice Department Inquiry to Reveal Whether 'Reserve Clause' in Contracts Can Be Basis for Court Action on a Monopoly Charge.

An investigation into the complaint of Representative Raymond J. Cannon (Democrat), Wisconsin, that the reserve clause in major league ball players' contracts is a violation in restraint of trade will be launched by the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said yesterday.

Representative Cannon charged in a letter to Mr. Cummings last week that the violation constitutes a monopoly and is an infraction of the Sherman anti-trust act. The Wisconsin Congressman called upon the Attorney General to open an investigation and to open court proceedings against the club magnates.

Mr. Cummings said last night that the inquiry will be started immediately, and directed his aides to ascertain the facts, stage a public investigation if necessary, and report to him at an early date whether or not court action can be supported.

That the Federal Bureau of Investigation may be brought into the investigation was hinted by Mr. Cummings when he said that, if necessary, Federal sleuths will be put on the trail of violations.

Representative Cannon's letter to the Attorney General came late last week and Mr. Cummings' aides have been studying the charges for the past several days. In his letter Mr. Cannon called the major league baseball owners "tyrants" and supported the ball player's right to play for any club that bids for his services.

Mr. Cannon's remarks were attacked Tuesday in The Post in a special dispatch from Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, who insisted that the reserve clause was the "very life of organized baseball." Any attempt to tamper with its effectiveness, Mr. Griffith said, would result in chaos and would destroy major league baseball in the United States.

Ford Frick, president of the National League, also attacked Cannon's letter in similar terms, as did other baseball leaders.

Mr. Cannon has long been a firebrand and a thorn in the side of the major league owners. He represented the ousted ball players following the 1919 Black Sox scandal and has since fought for players' rights.

Benjam Drives to Triumph in Bowie Kindergarten Stakes

Manhasset's Entries Get Place, Show

$168 Is Returned by Double on Square Play, Playnot.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., April 7.—Benjam, winner of two races in Florida last winter, won the equivalent of the 2-year-old championship of this track today by taking the Bowie Kindergarten Stakes, feature event of the day. Forced to the limit by Smoke Signal, a representative of the Manhasset Stable, Benjam scored by a neck margin with Last Lay, also from the Manhasset barn, third four lengths away from the chief battle.

Benjam, a highly regarded juvenile frmo the Bomar Stable, joins a long list of prominent horses which have won this 4-furlong test, including Vander Pool, Acautaw, Wise Daughter and Bright Light. Benjam's time of 49 1-5 was far from the track record but creditable over a track that was fast but dull.

The winner was well played at an $8.80 mutuel with the heavy money invested in the chances of the Manhasset entry.

A better than average midweek crowd of 10,000 witnessed a bitter struggle between the first two horses under a bright spring sky. The main struggle was between Benjam and Smoke Signal from the echo of the starting bell. The two hopped away from the starting gate together and first one and then the other had the advantage. Midway of the stretch run it appeared that Benjam was about to draw out to an easy victory as Jockey Willie Saunders, of Kentucky Derby fame, had the best part of a half-length lead. However, Smoke Signal did not lack courage. Jockey Les Fallon asked his charge for a drive and the colt responded by gaining steadily in the closing sixteenth.

Square Play Wins First.

The five other starters finished in about the order that they began the sprint. Last Lay had to race wide, but managed to cling to the third honors over Bunny Baby. At least, the camera said so.

The photo had to be consulted at the finish of the first race and the outside horse, Square Play, took down the decision in perhaps the closest fit of the meeting. Boosel, a 25-1 shot, was second and Waterman was third. Square Play and Boosel hooked up at the head of the stretch and fought a head-and-head battle to the wire. The winner was timed in 1:16 1-5 for the 6 furlongs and paid a $27.60 mutuel. Sea Gull and several other well-played horses were crowded in a jam soon after the break.

Ilchester, ridden by Jackie Westrope, proved much the best in the second race. After being shuffled back at the start, the son of Dunlin took the long way home, circling his field to defeat Fair Time by three lengths. Third money went to Headin Home, one that set the early pace. Ilchester stepped the 6 furlongs in 1:14 1-5 and paid a $9.50 mutuel.

Playnot Triumphs.

Playnot, in the colors of A. C. Compton, won the third race by 1½ lengths from Linlace, the property of W. V. McGrath. Third in the limit field of 12 was Gemwick, a field horse. Playnot was prominently placed from the start and took command in the early stretch to hold sway to the end. Jockey M. Peters rode the winner, which paid $7.80 and ran the 6 furlongs in 1:16 1-5.

Sir Rose, closing at $18.40 for $2, was on the head end from flag fall to finish of the 6-furlong fifth contest. Hubert LeBlanc's followers were rooting for the long shot, which got home by a length. Real Jam was awarded the place over Credulous, the favorite, in a photo finish. Sir Rose ran Credulous into defeat while holding to his lead in game fashion. Real Jam, late finding his stride, just got up to catch Credulous in the last nod.

Selections at Bowie.

Dear Al:

With added days for horse racing, legal bookmaking and slot-machine taxes, Maryland is now going in for harness racing and I understand that a five-day meeting will be held at the Pimlico track the last week in July. This will be the first Grand Circuit meeting in this part of the woods for 25 years. It is planned to conduct the sulky racing with pari-mutuel betting and in the same manner as the flat-race programs have been conducted. Efforts will be made to bring the $25,000 American Pacing Derby, second only to the $50,000 Hambletonian in the sport, to Baltimore in 1938. There is some doubt as to whether or not the first few meetings would be profitable and a group of sportsmen, headed by George Norris, a member of the State racing commission, has agreed to back the sport. The shift to harness racing would mean that the Pimlico track would have to be hardened somewhat. To date, the Pimlico Jockey Club has not agreed to the proposition but it has been indicated that the group will sanction it. Clocker Mike was unreported yesterday although rumors were that he was in the vicinity of the Dismal Swamp. I'm beginning to sour on the finish camera. Funny, but I can't remember an argument last year on the finishes at Charles Town and that track did not go in for photography.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SQUARE PLAY, $27.60, $15.50, $9.20; BOOSEL, $17.80, $12.30; WATERMAN, $11.20.

SQUARE PLAY, sent into contention with a rush after breaking in a tangle, engaged BOOSEL at the head of the stretch and finished courageously under vigorous handling. BOOSEL raced TROSTAR into defeat and fought it out willingly to the end. WATERMAN, off poorly, worked his way to the leaders on the outside and closed with a belated rush. TROSTAR faltered slightly after contesting BOOSEL for the early pace. VERITAS, first out of the gates, showed a good forward effort and is probably ready. SEA GULL had no chance with the start. HAPPY AND GAY moved up with a bold rush leaving the backstretch and then tired. PILEDRIVER had early speed.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:08½. Winner, P. DaLee Waits' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ILCHESTER, $9.50, $5.00, $4.10; FAIR TIME, $7.80, $6.50; HEADIN HOME, $4.20.

ILCHESTER, forced to go to the outside for racing room after being shuffled back at the break, came around field at the stretch turn and easily drew out on FAIR TIME in the closing stages. The latter wrestled the lead from HEADIN HOME approaching the stretch turn and continued gamely, but could not cope with the winner. HEADING HOME, favored by the break, opened a good lead leaving the backstretch and continued willingly when displaced. TAKUS dropped back at the start, was in tight quarters on the swing for the stretch and went evenly when clear. ICY WIND had good early speed.

PLAYNOT, off in the first flight, ran CANTER BELLE and FAIR SCOUT into defeat and drew clear to hold away to the end under stout handling. LINLACE, unable to find racing room in the early running, came with a rush when clear and was nearing down the winner. GEMWICK, last away, circled her field and closed with a belated rush. BRIEF was forwardly placed throughout. KALEIDA showed a good effort. BOUNDING made a sharp move in the early stretch and then faltered. FAIR SCOUT went to the top with good speed on the turn for home, but stopped badly. CANTER BELLE set the pace for a short period after the break and then retired.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BENJAM, $8.80, $3.60, $2.60; SMOKE SIGNAL (entry), $2.30, $2.20; LAST LAY (entry), $2.20.

BENJAM came through on the inside to take the lead after the opening eighth and was kept to a strong drive to stave off SMOKE SIGNAL. The latter was hard ridden throughout and fought it out with good courage under a drive. LAST LAY raced on the outside of the leaders and was faltering at the end. BUNNY BABY could not better position. ARAHO LASS went evenly. FRANKE BROOKE showed a fair effort. LACONIC was always outrun.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:43½. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Winner, A. R. Mann's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR ROSE, $18.40, $7.80, $5.50; REAL JAM, $5.90, $3.60; CREDULOUS, $3.10.

SIR ROSE, away alertly and well handled, opened a good lead leaving the backstretch, shook off challenges of HOLLAND and ROYAL BIRD, and held away under a strong ride to the end. REAL JAM was forced very wide for racing room and came with a belated rush in the stretch. CREDULOUS worked his way to the leaders early and finished gamely and appeared to have taken the place. SWIFTLET could not better position, but finished gamely. HOLLAND and ROYAL BIRD had good early speed.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:11. Off at 5:13. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Winner, A. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAGSTONE, $10.90, $4.90, $3.50; MADDEST, $3.00, $2.40; SAY DO, $3.20.

FLAGSTONE, in excellent form, shook off ENGLES BOY without effort and held away to the finish while being taken in hand during the closing sixteenth. MADDEST, sore going to the post, was outrun for a half, came between horses with a belated rush to take the place in the final strides. SAY DO, forwardly placed from the start, was closest to FLAGSTONE when placed to a drive, but faltered nearing the end. BALAPIN was forced wide at the stretch turn and rallied only mildly. ENGLES BOY was used up setting and forcing the pace.

Navy Nine Outslugs Harvard, 12-10; Netmen Beat Hoyas, 9-0

Loose Game Is Called Off In Seventh

Mann Hits Homer in His Debut for Middies; Errors Plentiful.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 7.—The Navy won its first baseball game this afternoon, defeating Harvard, 12 to 10, in a loosely played but exciting game which struggled through 7½ innings and was called for darkness after having gone 2½.

Harvard sent Elliott to the bench in the first after four runs had been scored on singles by Johns, Billodeau and McDreenan, Lupein's double and McGinness' first error. Navy equaled the tally in the second and scored three runs in the third, one in the fourth, three more in the fifth and a final one in the seventh.

Ralph Mann, a sophmore, playing his first game, relieved Anderson at rightfield in the fifth and cracked out a homer to deep center, driving Matheson across the plate ahead of him, on his first effort with the stick. He made a corking single the next time up, scoring Matheson again.

Navy made its quartet of tallies in the second on singles by Schroeder and Matheson, passes to Cooke and McGuinness, Bruckel's sacrifice and Lupien's error.

Tech Victor Over St. Peters in Debut

Coming from behind in the last half of the ninth inning with three runs, Tech High School's baseball team erased a 6-8 deficit and chalked up a 9-8 victory over St. Peter's Prep School, of Jersey City, yesterday in its opening game of the season.

Roy Lemerise's single with two down and the bases full decided the issue, a free-scoring and free-hitting affair from the third inning on. Tech almost lost the decision after an earlier rally had wiped out the visitors' 4-3 lead and given it a commanding 7-4 advantage. Linkins, Sorrell and Donnis, who hurled for the visitors, were none too effective, giving up a total of 10 hits. Eichler went the distance for the Jersey team.

Nats to Leave Florida After Today's Game

Head for Chattanooga and Three Games With Lookouts.

Orlando, April 7.—The Nats bow out of Florida tomorrow following an exhibition game here with their Chattanooga farmhands.

After the game the two clubs will become trainmates, headed for Chattanooga, where they are listed for three battles before the Nats swing into Atlanta and thence North.

Piqued at their defeat by Chattanooga in a battle last week, the Nats are gunning for revenge. Monte Weaver will do the bulk of the Washington pitching.

The absence of Al Simmons and Ben Chapman from the Nats' outfield against the Tigers today was accountable to the fact that they had been given permission to proceed to Chattanooga in advance of the team.

Jimmy DeShong can count his performance against the Tigers today as one of the sourest of his pitching career. In addition to giving up nine hits and 5 runs in four innings, DeShong permitted two Tigers—Gerald Walker and Hank Greenberg—to steal second base while he was holding the ball.

Bowie Notes

The $10,000 Chesapeake stakes run at Havre de Grace has suddenly jumped into prominence as a trial stake for the Kentucky Derby. Out of the 47 nominations, 23 are eligible for the Churchill Downs event two weeks later.

In this race, Walter M. Jefford's Matey, defeated by the Calumet Farms' Privileged in the Pimlico Futurity last fall, will make his 1937 debut. The colt has received a special "prep" with the sole idea of copping the Preakness May 15. Matey has impressed the rail birds immensely by the splendid way in which he has taken his training.

Another candidate for the Chesapeake is the Glen Riddle Farms' War Admiral which gave great promise last fall by copping the East Shore Handicap, the big fall two-year-old feature. War Admiral is training nicely and should be hard to beat over a distance of ground.

Hal Price Headley's Whopper, a dismal failure in the Widener Challenge Cup, will get another try in the Harford Handicap, opening day feature at Havre de Grace. If Whopper comes out of the race in good shape, he will be hurried to New York to start in the Paumonok Handicap, outstanding feature of the Jamaica meeting. Whopper, in keen form, will be a hard horse to trim.

Two candidates for the $5,000 added Harford Handicap, opening day feature at Havre de Grace on Monday, turned in good workouts today . . . they were Whopper and Fraidy Cat, both the property of Hal Price Headley . . . Goldey F., the filly sensation of 1936, died yesterday at Belmont of pneumonia contracted when she was shipped from Florida . . . the filly was purchased at the Saratoga sales for $150 and won her owner more than $18,000 . . . Mrs. W. A. Bridges recently refused an offer of $20,000 for her filly . . . Jockey R. Morris was suspended for the remainder of the meetig for cutting across the field in today's first race . . . Harry Richards will have the mount if Jay Jay, Howard Bruce's speedster starts in the Harford Handicap . . . Maryland horsemen and turf followers are pulling for J. W. Y. Martin's Triple Action to make a good showing in the Chesapeake at Havre de Grace . . . on that race depends whether or not the son of Canter will be shipped to the Kentucky Derby . . . Triple Action is a Maryland bred and packed a stout stretch punch last fall . . . Hubert LeBlanc is the third leading rider in the country this year . . . Johnny Gilbert decided not to ride Flagstone, the veteran stake horse which has been away from racing for almost two years . . . it is reported that he said the old fellow was too bad-legged to run . . . and Flagstone crossed him up by carrying Jockey Joe Wagner to an easy victory . . . and will hardly run for the cheap claiming price again in the near future . . . Bowie has gotten by so far without a sponging, a doping of or a painted horse . . . as far as we know . . . the daily double at Charles Town will be on the second and third races, giving the late arrivals a chance at the twin bet . . . those who have gone on record against racing in the District continue to flock to Bowie.

Tigers Blast 2 Nat Pitchers To Win, 12-10

Salveson, DeShong Prove Very Popular With the Detroit Sluggers.

when Cochrane contributed a single.

But the Detroit fellows were only warming up against Salveson at that time. They began some serious thumping in the next inning after the Nats had scored a run on Cecil Travis' double and Johnny Mihalic's single to take a brief 8-7 lead. The Nats' old pal, Jack Russell, was in the box for the Tigers and the Nats reversed their tactics of the inning before when they secured four runs on one hit.

Salveson Is Easy.

In that seventh, against Russell, they scored one run on four hits, two runs being cut off at the plate the Tigers certainly got back to him, the big right-hander had a nightmare experience in the seventh when the Tigers came up with five runs.

They warmed up to him with a pair of singles by White and Walker when a pair of Nats attempted some suicidal dashes for home on short blows to left.

But getting back to Salveson, and and only a miraculous stop by Joe Kuhel got Gehringer out. And then along came Greenberg—again.

He hit a ball in the general direction of downtown and it cleared the leftfield fence for his second homer off Salveson in two innings, scoring White and Walker in advance of himself. It was no bunt.

The attack on Salveson moderated a bit when Rookie Chet Laabs could collect only a single, but it was on in full blast a bit later when Rudy York, who had hit only a triple against Salveson in the previous inning, atoned for that failure by banging a pitch to the farthest corner of centerfield for an inside-the-park homer.

'Pen Is Mightier . . .' Dean Loves Scribes

Daytona Beach, Fla., April 7 (AP). Dizzy Dean was "sorry" tonight, he said, "about what happened last week" in a Tampa hotel lobby—a fight with two baseball scribes.

"It's the first time I ever had any trouble with a sports writer, and you can take it from ol' Diz, it'll be the last time. I believe in the ol' saying about the 'pen bein' mightier than the sword —yesser—an' I want you boys to be my friends."

Giants Beat Indians; Yanks, Red Sox Score

Foxx Hits His First Homer of Spring to Help Boston Win; Cards Defeat Cincinnati; Chapman Trade Is Denied by Red Sox.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., April 7.—The Pittsburgh Pirates pounded three pitchers today for an easy 12-to-5 victory over an Albuquerque team led by Bill Delancy, one-time Cardinal catcher.

The Buccos collected 19 hits from three home-town hurlers, bunching them in the first two innings for seven runs.

Bill Swift, Ken Heintzelman and Jim Weaver shared the Pirate pitching assignments, and took things easy behind the adequate lead piled up by the Buccos' heavy hitting.

Shawnee, Okla.—The New York Giants rallied in the ninth inning, sent three runs across the plate and scored an 8-to-7, victory over the Cleveland Indians today. The Indians still lead in their series, 5 to 4.

Carl Hubbell, Fred Fitzsimmons and Dick Coffman shared the New York hurling. Hubbell allowed two hits, one of them a homer by Hal Trosky with none on, in his three-inning stretch. The Indians got to Fitzsimmons for five runs in the fifth. Geoffrey Heath's four-bagger scored their final run off Dick Coffman in the eighth.

Earl Whitehill, Dennis Galehouse and Al Milnar shared the Indians' hurling.

Fort Worth, Tex.—The New York Yankees rung up their sixth successive barnstorming victory in defeating Fort Worth, 6 to 3, today.

The Yanks collected 18 safeties. Johnny Murphy and Monte Pearson allowed ten hits. Murphy pitched six innings and yielded seven.

Seabring, Fla. — Jimmy Foxx's first 1937 home run, poled out in the third inning with two mates on base, today provided the Red Sox with a 3-to-0 victory over the Newark Bears.

The rest of the sockers, however, were unable to do much against the pitching of Johnny Fallon, formerly of Holy Cross, and Joe Beggs, late of Geneva College.

Little Rock, Ark., April 7 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics bunched four of their seven hits in the second inning today to score a 2-to-1 victory over Little Rock of the Southern Association.

Johnson led off with a single and advanced on an infield out. Brucker doubled, scoring Johnson. Blakeney singled, scoring Brucker with the winning run.

Daytona Beach, Fla., April 7 (AP). The St. Louis Cardinals used two of their ace pitchers to down the Cincinnati Reds in an exhibition game here today, 7 to 2.

Dizzy Dean settled down after the Reds scored two runs off him in the fifth, when he took over the pitching. Lon Warneke, former Cub ace, started and held Cincinnati hitless the first four innings. The Reds made all their hits off Dizzy, who also committed an error when he threw high to Leo Durocher, Card shortstop, in the ninth.

Boston, April 7.—General Manager Eddie Collins of the Boston Red Sox tonight denied reports that Ben Chapman, speedy outfielder who was traded to the Washington Senators last seasons by the New York Yankees, was slated to join the Boston club.

"We haven't even made overtures to the Washington club for Chapman," Collins said. "It's just another rumor."

San Antonio, Tex., April 7.—Rogers Hornsby led his squad of St. Louis Browns through an intensive batting practice today as the American Leaguers polished off their workouts before beginning an 8-game series with the Chicago Cubs here tomorrow. The series closes next Thursday at Springfield, Mo.

Clearwater, Fla., April 7.—The Brooklyn Dodgers began cutting down their big spring training squad today by sending 13 players back to the minor leagues.

Shortston Woodrow Williams was optioned to Louisville; Infielders Marion Adair and Ray White were sent to Knoxville and Bob Duffey, Jake Houtekamer, Otto Denning, Walter van Grofski, John Grifka, Chet Manning, Bert Haas, Jack Grossman, Jim Kimbrell and Ken Miller were shipped to Elmira.

El Paso, Tex., April 7.—Big LeRoy Parmelee held the Chicago White Sox to 6 hits and paced a 17-hit attack with three singles and a double today as the Cubs won an easy 10-to-2 victory, squaring the spring training series with their American League rivals at four games each.

Sports in Brief

New York, April 7.—The New York Athletic Club polo team, sparked by Clarence (Buddy) Combs laid down a barrage of goals in the third and fourth chukkers tonight to whip the 124th Field Artillery team of Chicago, 20-13, and take the first game of the senior East-West championships at Squadron A armory.

New York, April 7.—Willie Mosconi, Philadelphia, scored his third victory in six games in the world's pocket billiard championship tonight when he defeated Fay Gainer, Vineland, N. J., 125 to 42, in 11 innings. It was Gainer's fourth defeat.

New York, April 7.—Continuing the unimpressive showings that have marked the "big name" bowlers in the current American Bowling Congress championships, Joe Falcaro turned in a mediocre 539 three-game score in tonight's session of the Kesling classic.

Jack Hader, Meske Meet In Mat Bout

Meske to Turn Villain in Match Tonight at Arena; Other Tilts.

Tired of being a sissy, Ed Meske, the Akron Adonis, will attempt to abandon his role of meekness and become a regular cave man when he clashes with Jack Hader at Turner's Arena tonight.

Meske, for years one of the mildest performers on the mat, announced early last week that he would try the tactics that have made successes of Laverne Baxter, George Koverley, Joe and Rudy Dusek and his opponent tonight.

Meske was ruined, or practically so, as far as dirty wrestling is concerned, by going to college. An education is not enough to wreck a prospective fierce tearer-apart under ordinary circumstances, but Ed did not go to college under ordinary circumstances. He was a member of the school wrestling team.

In a semifinal scheduled for 30 minutes, which is long enough, goodness knows, Wee Willie Davis, he of the ponderous tootsies, will tangle with George McLeod, whose motto is "Thirty years a wrestler, and never broke an egg."

Ted Key, who is no relation to the bridge in Georgetown, will make his local debut in a 30-minute preliminary against Jim Coffield. Key is a former football player at the U. C. L. A. Hank Barber, the Jewish star, will growl with George Lenihan and Ernie Powers will oppose Floyd Marshall in other prelims.

Dunlap Wins North-South 2d-Round Play

Davidson, District Entry, Also Advances in Golf at Pinehurst.

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 7.—The defending champion, the medalist and all the favorites got their men in the first round of match play today in the North and South Amateur Golf Tournament.

George Dunlap, jr., who won his fifth championship last year, had trouble off the tee, but eliminated Robert Lowry, of Shamokin, Pa., 4 and 3.

James T. Hunter, middle-aged medalist from North Adams, Mass., advanced in a breeze over R. L. Pittman, Fayetteville, N. C., 6 and 5.

Bobby Dunkelberger, 17-year-old High Point, N. C., star, won the day's most protracted match, putting out R. W. Knowles, of Boston, at the nineteenth hole. Dunkelberger, who a year ago defeated former National Champion Francis Ouimet in the first round, was 1 down and 3 to play, but squared it with a birdie. He went 1 up when Knowles pulled into a trap on the short seventeenth and was set to win the eighteenth until laid a dead stymie. On the first extra hole, Knowles drove into a pine thicket.

Frank Strafaci, the mighty mite from Brooklyn and a favorite to reach the finals, had a 72 in winning by the widest margin of the first round over H. H. Russell, of Coral Gables, Fla., 7 and 6.

R. P. Davidson, of Washington, a familiar figure on Pinehurst courses, edged out R. J. Zipse, of Kew Gardens, Long Island, 1 up. They were even going to the home hole, which Davidson won with a par for a medal 72 to Zipse's 73.

Women's Bowling Loop Holds Annual Banquet

The Women's Bowling League of the United States Chamber of Commerce gave its spring banquet last evening at the Shoreham.

Miss Regina Jones and Miss Helen Kellogg, who tied for first honors in the tournament; Miss Alice Althen, who rolled the highest game, and Miss Frances Ashford, who scored the highest set, were guests of honor.

Special Session Seen To Settle Texas Race Bill

Austin, Tex., April 7 (AP).—Gov. James V. Allred hinted today he might call a special session to settle the horse-race betting repeal issue in Texas should the present Legislature fail to act.

Approved overwhelmingly by the House, a bill to repeal the law legalizing wagering hung in the Senate with that body refusing a fourth time in 24 hours to set it for early consideration.

Reilly Will Head Annual Banquet Of 'G' Men's Club

JOHN A. REILLY.

John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank and one of Georgetown University's most ardent sports fans, has accepted the role of chairman of the fourteenth annual "G" dinner scheduled April 28 at the Willard Hotel.

A member of the local bar, although not actively identified with the association since 1931, Reilly received his LL. B. with the class of 1924. He practiced until 1931, when he was appointed vice president of the Federal-American Bank.

Prominent in local financial circles since, he was elected president of the Second National Bank January 15, 1936, and has served in that capacity since.

on the second nine on putts from 5 to 8 feet. Buddy made three birdies in succession from the thirteenth to fifteenth holes. An approach shot on the final hole, after a beautiful 240-yard tee shot, came within 6 inches of finding the cup. He easily holed the putt for the 66.

Bowie Starts Well.

Buddy Bowie, Indian Spring junior star, paced the early finishers with his 73, and it may have been more of a threat had he not found trouble on the second hole, taking a 6 and 5 on his two trip. Charles Clark, red-headed St. John's entry, made the only birdie of the day on that hole, the hardest on the course.

With second-round matches scheduled on Saturday afternoon, the four semifinalists will continue play Sunday morning with the winner decided in the finals Sunday afternoon.

Jimmy Ferguson, former prep golfer, held the nine-hole record of 31 that Sharkey tied in his second trip around. Horton Smith, nationally famous professional, shot 67 in an exhibition match last year on the Garrett Park layout, playing with Sharkey.

Sulky Race Meet Is Due At Pimlico

Harness Racing Is to Return With Pari-Mutuel Betting.

Baltimore, Md., April 7.—Harness racing is coming back to Baltimore in all its glory the last week in July, at Pimlico's famous track. The trotters will make their bow for the first time with pari-mutuel betting and with a Grand Circuit meeting of five days. All that is holding up the announcement of the plans for the revival of this popular form of racing of a quarter of a century ago is the signature of Gov. Harry Nice to the bill that passed unanimously both houses of the Legislature.

The bill authorizes harness racing in the State for ten days a year with pari-mutuel betting, and the belief is that the Governor undoubtedly will approve the measure.

It also has the support of the State Racing Commission and was sponsored by George Norris, a member of that group.

The new bill before the Governor calls for pari-mutuel betting, which almost insures the use of one of Maryland's four major race tracks and none is so well located for the midsummer meeting as Pimlico.

Norris added there would be no trouble getting dates to include a Grand Circuit meeting some time during the summer, because he has been in touch with officials of the Trotting Horse Club of America, and they agreed to set aside five days, pending the passing of the bill in Maryland.

Norris stated no offer had been made to the Maryland Jockey Club officials because the bill had not yet been approved, and the men interested had not agreed on a site, but he could see no reason why a meeting would not be a success there with the modern betting facilities.

Walper Shoots 70, But Is 7th in Garden Links

Charleston, S. C., April 7.—Rookie Sam Snead, of West Virginia, sensational newcomer to golf's professional ranks, gave the veterans something to shoot at today in the opening round of the $5,000 Tournament of Gardens.

Leading a concerted attack on par figures for the Country Club of Charleston course, 24-year-old Snead came home with a great 67, which easily could have been a 64, to take command at the outset in golf's final tussle of the winter campaign.

Driving his tee shots far down the middle and laying his chip shots dead, Snead clipped 4 strokes from the par card of 36, 35—71, and lost three additional blows when putts hung on the lip of cups.

Right on the heels of the White Sulphur Springs youngster, who is fifth among the money winners in his first time out on the trail of golf gold, came two veterans—Lighthorse Harry Cooper, of Chicago, and Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., the victor here the last two years.

Picard, formerly the Charleston pro who moved on to Hershey when he moved into the big money, had a pair of 34's, while Cooper, leading the golfing bankers with a pay roll thus far of $6,773, fashioned nines of 35-33.

Just a single blow back of this pair were Johnny Revolta of Chicago with 36-33 and Ben Loving of Richmond, Va., an unheralded professional who made the winter circuit for the first time this season. Loving put together 35-34.

The greatest opportunity to lead the field was stroked away by Leo Walper, the driving range professional from Washington, D. C. Walper's outgoing 32, four under par, was the best single 9-hole stretch of the day, but he stumbled coming in to 3-putt three holes and take a 39 which left him seventh.

Lehman Corp. 9 Months' Net $10,949,275

Asset Value of Investing Company Is $140.01 Per Share.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 7. — Net asset value as of March 31 of Lehman Corporation, an investigating concern, was placed at $102,866,951, equal to $140.01 a share on the outstanding capital stock, in the report for the first quarter of 1937, made public today.

As of December 31, 1936, the corresponding net asset value was $137.20. In both cases the figure given was after deducting allowance for Federal normal and State taxes and for management compensation, but without allowance for Federal excess profits tax or tax on undistributed profits.

Net income for the nine months ended March 31, after all charges, including taxes, operating expenses and provision for management compensation, was reported at $10,949,275, or $15.90 a share. The report, the first issued by the company to disclose the complete portfolio of security holdings, showed common stocks held amounted to 76.3 per cent of gross assets.

Radio Corporation.

Preliminary estimes indicate that the business of Radio Corporation of America and its subsidiaries for the first quarter of 1937 was 10 per cent better than for the like period of 1936, David Sarnoff, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting today. Net profit after all deductions, he said, would amount to $2,200,000, equal after preferred dividend requirements to 10 cents a share on the common stock, compared with $1,280,000, or a deficit of approximately 1 cent a share, in the first quarter last year.

International Business Machines.

January and February of this year were the best two months in the history of International Business Machines Corporation from an earnings standpoint, Thomas J. Watson, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting today. Despite increased wages, materials costs and taxes, and without price increases, 1936 earnings were the largest for any year in the company's history, he added.

International Business Machines factory workers are now receiving an average of $1,855 a year for all qualified male employes, he said. The company is carrying $5,000 of insurance for every employe in the United States who has been employed three years or more, with lesser amounts for shorter employment.

The Market

Stocks and Commodities Decline on Rumors of Gold Price Change.

New York, April 7.—Government bonds were only slightly lower and their somewhat steadier tone was consistent enough with the prevailing pessimism in speculative markets. In those quarters the fear would not down that the Administration was planning to take a deflationary step of one kind or another. Commodity prices were mostly lower and stocks declined, rather sharply in the higher priced issues with thin markets. Turnover in stocks rose to above the 2,000,000-share mark.

Dollars completed the picture by rising briskly against sterling and francs, a natural sequence to any lowering of the gold price rumored to take place. July wheat closed ⅜ of a cent lower at 127¾ cents a bushel. A boost of ¼ per cent in time money added to the general confusion.

Stock prices were weak frmo the start and volume was the heaviest on declines, which ranged from 1 to 9 points. Steel, rail, metal, chemical, oil, motor and rubber shares drew the most selling attention. Chrysler opened 2 points lower and then drpoped 3 points more, regardless of sentiment of the strike. Steel began 2 points down and then doubled the fall. General Motors sold below 60 for the first time this year.

New low prices were paid for a number of important stocks. Mining shares tumbled more than 2 points apiece. Rails broke sharply. Santa Fe, B. & O. and New York Central dropped 1 to 2 points. Owens Glass cracked 5 points. Westinghouse, Western Union, Case, Manville and other recent climbers gave up 2 to 4 points. Poorest prices for most stocks were paid in the late trading.

Too Much Nervousness.

In lieu of anything else fresh, market observers were inclined to explain the weakness in stocks and the unsteadiness of some commodity markets to the rumors that the Treasury, as a measure for bringing down commodity prices, would lower its gold buying price. Such action would be generally regarded as a deflationary move, as it would have the effect, if material cut were made, in bringing up the value of the dollar. The most popular of the rumors was that the gold price in effect would be lowered through a lifting of the Treasury service fee—now one-fourth of 1 per cent—charged on the metal it buys.

No new law would be needed for such a change, as the Treasury already is empowered to set any fee it chooses, which is deducted from the $35 an ounce now paid for gold. Such a change, or any other scheme, designed to check the importation of gold and lift dollar value, as a tariff on gold or an outright change in the purchasing price, were partially denied by officials at Washington. It was further reported that "there is no intimation of any change." Further rumors, which seemed to excite the London markets, that some New York banks had told London correspondents that they would not accept gold sent on consignment for sale to the Treasury, also seemed to be without foundation.

Too much nervousness seems to be rising over possible deflationary steps to be taken by this country, but the frequent changes in announced monetary policy make it understandable. Much as the administration doubtless fears an inflationary boom, its whole policy from the start has been built upon a deeply laid foundation of inflation—huge deficits, an undervalued dollar, higher prices and higher costs of production, price pegging, an army of voters on the dole, repeated statements of belief in an economic and social theory of redistribution of wealth and incomes, and a level of Federal expenditure supportable only by a business boom.

Not Right Now.

Official denials notwithstanding, as reported in the press, the direct quotation of Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, on the question of a change in the gold price was more in keeping with the spirit of the times. It kept the ball of uncertainty rolling. Morgenthau's reply was: "Not right now." It was made about 10 o'clock this morning.

Commodity Prices.

The chill in speculative markets developed into a freeze with the spread of apprehension to the London trading. Commodities there fell heavily on rumors that President Roosevelt was about to carry out his threats against the strong commodity markets on this side. Those rumors were augmented yesterday by a story that a change was about to be made in the Treasury's buying price for gold, but that report was denied this morning. However, the lopping of a cent a pound from the domestic price of copper gave some truth to the suggestions that part of the rise in commodities has been somewhat unreal. It opened a vista of further declines, and the uncertainty of the whole outlook helped to depress share prices.

Chrysler.

Chrysler opened 2¼ points lower on 3,000 shares. Traders were more impressed with the estimates of losses sustained in the strike period than with the prospect of resumption of operations now that a settlement has been made. What has been lost probably can't be regained, but the stock has come down considerably. The strikes in General Motors, Chrysler and other plants have turned what promised to be a record-breaking earning year for the motor makers into at best an ordinary year.

Corn Jumps 2½ Cents as Wheat Slumps

Decline Follows 4-Cent Drop in Wheat Prices at Liverpool.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago April 7.—Unlike most commodities, corn ran up briskly in price at the last today, scoring about 2½ cents maximum gain, as against 2½ cents earlier loss.

The late jump of corn values helped to overcome in part a general tumble of grain prices today following a sensational fall of more than 4 cents in Liverpool wheat quotations accompanied by unconfirmed rumors abroad that President Roosevelt would take action to reduce prices of staples in the United States.

At the close, corn was varying from ⅜ cent decline to a gain of 2½ cents compared with yesterday's finish May, 1.30½@1.30¾; July, 1.21@1.21¼; September, 1.21⅛@1.21⅜; wheat, ⅜@¾ down; May, 1.41⅜@1.41½; July, 1.27½@1.27¾; September, 1.23⅛@1.23⅜; oats, ⅝ off to ½ up; May, 50⅛@50¼, and rye showing ⅝@1½ setback; May, 1.16. Gold Output Drops Sharply For February

Seasonal Decline Is 11.3% Compared With 5.2% Last Year.

In the sharpest seasonal declines since 1934, American gold production in February dropped to the lowest level since February a year ago, according to the monthly estimates on world gold production prepared by the American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

A decline in February from January total is normal because of the short month and unfavorable weather factors. This year, however, the decline amounted to 11.3 per cent, compared with 5.2 per cent in 1936, 5.7 per cent in 1935 and 25.1 per cent in 1934. Despite the large dip, total production for the first two months is running 9.2 per cent ahead of the comparable period of last year.

Output of mines in the United States was placed at 291,000 fine ounces, compared with 328,000 in January and 276,000 in February, 1936. Production for the first two months at 619,000 fine ounces sets a new high for recent years, however, comparing with the previous high of 567,000 ounces in the same period last year.

Seasonal declines for the major producers caused world production, exclusive of Soviet Russia, for which no monthly data are available, to drop to 2,274,000 fine ounces. This compares with 2,394,000 ounces in January, but with 2,137,000 in February, 1936.

Canada is making a relatively better showing than the United States and for the time being has displaced the United States as the third largest producer in the world.

Reports from South Africa already indicate the possibility that this year will set the highest annual total in the history of the famous Rand areas, and will exceed the previous record of 11,559,000 ounces in 1932 by a comfortable margin.

Silver Price Drops, Following London

New York, April 7 (AP).—The price of foreign mined bar silver dropped today to 46 cents an ounce, a decline of ¾ of a cent, following similar declines in London and Shanghai.

On April 5, in response to a wave of Far Eastern buying, the price here was boosted 1⅜ cents to 46⅝ cents. Yesterday another ⅛ of a cent was added.

Curb Prices Drop With 'Big Board'

New York, April 7 (AP).—The curb market was depressed today by the broad selling movement which swept the big board and leading commodity exchanges. Metals, oils and the general run of shares with commodity backgrounds offered the poorest resistance to pressure. Some of the utilities fared better, and one or two closed with gains.

Aluminum Co. of America closed at 162, off 6¼; Sherwin Williams, 133, off 2¼; Pittsburgh Plate Glass 132½, off 2; Fisk Rubber 16, off 1⅜; Hecla Mining 18¼, off 1¼; Newmont 121¼, off 1¼; New Jersey Zinc 85¼, off 2¾; Creole Petroleum 29⅜, off 1⅛; McWilliams Dredging 24, off 1. American Gas & Electric rose 1 to a closing level of 36. Transactions totaled 548,000 shares against 453,000 yesterday.

HousePrepares For Passage of Anti-Lynch Bill

Declines 257 to 122 to Debate Mitchell Measure; May Vote Tuesday.

By Russell Smith.

Passage by the House Tuesday of a drastic anti-lynching bill was indicated yesterday when the chamber declined, on a 257-to-122 vote, to debate the Mitchell bill and thereby cleared the way for a vote Monday on the stronger Gavagan bill.

Size of yesterday's vote presaged approval of the latter measure, a forecast confirmed by Representative Mitchell (Democrat), Illinois, author of the rejected bill.

"It will go through," said that member, "like a whirlwind."

Refusal of the House to consider the Mitchell bill after it was called up by Judiciary Committee Chairman Sumners (Democrat), Texas, was given by a coalition of opponents of anti-lynching legislation of any kind with supporters of the more stringent Gavagan bill, in the face of warnings that the bill is of dubious constitutionality.

"The House refused to consider the Mitchell bill," said Representative Fish (Republican), New York, a Gavagan bill backer, in expatiating upon the vote, "because it does not represent the views and wishes of the colored people of America. It is considered an emasculated anti-lynching bill and merely a political gesture and camouflage."

Indecision of Gavagan bill supporters as to tactics to pursue against the Mitchell bill apparently persisted until late in the day. A filibuster at first appeared in prospect, when reading of the voluminous record of Tuesday's House was insisted upon and a call of the lengthy roll also was demanded by Representative Gavagan (Democrat), New York.

Despite the favorable prospect for anti-lynching legislation in the House and past approval of such a bill by President Roosevelt, however, there appeared but slight chance it would be enacted at this session, for Senate filibusters are prepared to talk the Gavagan bill to death, if it becomes necessary.

Following the action of the House in rejecting the Mitchell bill, its sponsor attributed the defeat in considerable measure to decision by House Republicans Tuesday night to back the Gavagan bill.

Resentment Blamed.

"Resentment of the Republicans at a speech I made in June, 1936, has been cherished ever since, and found expression in their decision to vote against my bill in a body," the Illinois member said.

"Democrats who have aided them in this move will regret it, I believe, for no decision is likely by the Supreme Court on anti lynching legislation before the next election, if such legislation is passed now. Meanwhile, the Republicans will claim credit and use it to swing colored votes to that party."

Mitchell said he will work "wholeheartedly" for the Gavagan bill, and is sure it will pass the House, although he has grave doubts the Supreme Court will hold it constitutional.

Under House rules that body will vote Monday whether to discharge the Judiciary Committee from further consideration of the Gavagan bill. If that committee is discharged, under the terms of the resolution, six hours of debate will follow on Tuesday. It is hoped by supporters of that bill a vote can be had the same day.

Supply Bill Hearings Delayed Until Tuesday

Hearings on the District supply bill will not begin before the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations before next Tuesday, Senator Thomas, the chairman, stated yesterday.

Work on two other appropriations measures will prevent the District sub-committee from holding sessions, he explained.

Million-Dollar Shaft Causes 'Second Battle of San Jacinto'

Ayes of Texas Withheld From Proposal to Inscribe Names of National Figures, Gov. Allred on Memorial to Soldiers.

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., April 7.—A "second Battle of San Jacinto" raged here tonight over erection of a $1,100,000 memorial to soldiers who fought the first—but all the shooting this time was verbal.

The dispute centered around names—if any—to be inscribed on the lofty stone shaft being erected by the National and State governments a few yards from where one of Gen. Santa Ana's fleeing riflemen shot Gen. Sam Houston off his horse.

Originally the State board of control had proposed the names of President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner, Jesse Jones, RFC chairman, and Gov. James V. Allred be chiseled on the monument's cornerstone.

This precipitated a deluge of protests from patriotic societies. Daughters of the Republic of Texas brought the controversy to a climax by calling a mass meeting tonight to air all the proposals. They were supported by the Sons of the Republic of Texas.

These two societies proposed an inscription without any names of individuals. They further proposed that the inscription on the other side include: 'Daughters of the Republic of Texas, Sons of the Republic of Texas and Patriotic Friends."

At Austin, Gov. Allred said he had no authority in the matter but that he sided with the Sons and Daughters in their fight.

The memorial, to be the tallest shaft in the Nation, will be dedicated at the cornerstone laying April 21.

Counsel for SEC Accused of Illegal Records Seizure

By the Associated Press.

David W. Peck, attorney for W. E. Hutton & Co., charged yesterday that Securities Commission counsel was guilty of "unconstitutional and unwarranted search and seizure" of private records.

Peck leveled the accusation at Counsel Jacob Gruber during a hearing into the commission's charge that the Hutton brokerage firm manipulated stock of Atlas Tack Corporation.

Peck objected to Gruber's examination of some of the monthly accounts of Hutton customers who bought Atlas stock. He protested use of any monthly statements which did not show purchases or sales or holdings of Atlas stock, while Gruber contended all the accounts must be studied to understand the ramifications of transactions in Atlas.

Presiding Officer Edward C. Johnson promised a ruling tomorrow.

The argument was one of many bitter verbal exchanges.

McGrath Charges Dropped by Board

Four charges involving the practice of law against Policeman William J. McGrath were dismissed by a Police Trial Board yesterday when the complaining witness refused to prosecute.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Matthias Mahorner, jr., requested that the board drop the charges against the policeman-lawyer. He said the Commissioners approved the action.

McGrath, who served as a clerk in the corporation counsel's office in Police Court for several years, was made a special assistant corporation counsel last year. He was transferred to a beat in the Ninth Precinct when the complaint was filed.

Ex-Sheriff Ends Life in Maryland

Arthur Sweeney, 55, of Croome, Md., a former sheriff of Prince Georges County, yesterday shot himself to death with a double-barreled shotgun in his general store in front of his home.

Leaving his wife, Mary, asleep, Sweeney entered the store, braced the gun against a wall, placed the muzzle against his heart and pushed the trigger with a cane. He died instantly.

And taken from the Scotch, these Shetlands have everything in the way of value. Although the nature of this cloth is soft, the Worsted-Tex Co. has deftly needled the Lounge coat into a shape retaining model. You'll like the athletic appearance of slightly wider shoulders, a fuller chest and lower, tapered waistline. The careful tailoring of the British Lounge V-8 makes it appear snug-fitting, yet it is as comfortable as any suit in your wardrobe. Let one of our experienced salesmen try a Shetland on you tomorrow.
